Republicans’ $95 billion Iran war package clears hurdle

Associated Press
Washington, July 17

REPUBLICANS ON the House Budget Committee advanced a $95 billion package Thursday for the Iran war, farm aid and President Donald Trump’s push for strict new voter ID requirements, moving forward on a party-line vote despite trouble in the full House — and the Senate.

Budget Committee Chairman Jodey Arrington framed the proposal as one last push to deliver for voters ahead of the midterm elections that will determine control of Congress. It advanced on a vote of 20-14.

“We are rallying to finish what we started when the American people sent us here,” said Arrington, R-Texas.

With Iran war funding making up the bulk of the package, some $60 billion, Arrington acknowledged that people can debate “why we’re there” in the overseas conflict. But he said the money is needed for basic supplies — “just the bombs, bullets and battlefield readiness for our men and women in uniform to finish the fight successfully and return home safely — that’s it.” The resolution also calls for $13 billion for Intelligence, $12 billion for Agriculture, and $10 billion for Administration, which handles voting and elections.

IRAN ATTACKS US ALLIES, DAMAGES POWER AND WATER DESALINATION PLANT IN KUWAIT

Bridges hit, Chabahar port tower falls as US escalates Iran offensive

Associated Press
Dubai, July 17

THE UNITED States expanded its airstrike campaign against Iran early Friday by hitting more bridges, energy sites and collapsing a tower at a key Iranian port, backing up US President Donald Trump’s threats to start striking infrastructure to pressure Tehran to ease its chokehold on the Strait of Hormuz.

Iran launched missile attacks against US-allied nations in the West Asia, including Qatar, a mediator in the war, and Kuwait, where a power and water desalination plant — vital infrastructure in the desert nation — was damaged.

The interim ceasefire agreed to last month has collapsed, and the region has endured days of back-and-forth attacks by the US and Iran as they battle for control of the strait.

Iranian officials say recent US strikes have killed dozens of people and wounded hundreds of others, with new casualties reported in Friday’s strikes.

The US airstrikes hit bridges overnight into Friday in Iran’s southern Hormozgan province, killing at least seven people, Iranian state television reported. The attacks hit Bandar Khamir, a city on Iran’s coast on the Strait of Hormuz.

The highway and railway bridge strikes appeared aimed at cutting off Bandar Abbas, Iran’s main port, from roads leading into the Islamic Republic’s central region onward to Tehran, the capital.

While other routes still are open, the US strikes could expand further, potentially disrupting both the movement of military materiel and goods needed for Iran’s 90 million people. Iran also acknowledged “attacks on power infrastructure” during the US airstrike campaign for the first time Friday when its Energy Ministry issued a call for people to use less power in southern provinces.

The US military’s Central Command said it hit dozens of targets in its latest airstrikes, which concluded at dawn Friday, the sixth night in a row of American attacks.

The strikes also collapsed a tower at Iran’s Chabahar port on the Gulf of Oman, a key trade route for landlocked, neighbouring Afghanistan, the state-run IRNA news agency reported.

Chabahar port, which Iran had been running with support from India, has been a repeated target of American airstrikes.

Iran described the tower as overseeing commercial traffic into the port. However, Iran’s paramilitary Revolutionary Guard also operates at ports across the country. As of 6 am Friday, the US strikes had killed at least 38 people and wounded more than 400 in Iran, Health Ministry spokesperson Hossein Kermanpour said.

On Friday, Qatar twice warned the public to take shelter as a barrage of Iranian missiles targeted the nation. People heard explosions overhead as air defences fired to intercept the missiles. Qatar’s Interior Ministry said falling debris wounded a child.

Iran also targeted Bahrain and Kuwait early Friday. In Kuwait, authorities said Iran attacked a power and water desalination plant, causing widespread damage to the station. About 90 per cent of the country’s drinking water comes from desalination.

Kuwait said it extinguished the blaze and was working to assess the damage and get the station working again.

Jordan’s military said it intercepted three incoming missiles Friday morning launched by Iran. Explosions also could be heard Friday morning in Irbil and Sulaymaniyah in northern Iraq’s semiautonomous Kurdish region as air defences targeted incoming fire.

Xi pitches China as leader of new global AI order, challenges dominance of US

Shanghai, Beijing, July 17

CHINESE PRESIDENT Xi Jinping on Friday cast Beijing as the champion of a new global AI order, using China’s premier tech conference to promote open-source technology and challenge US influence over the rules governing the fast-moving sector.

In a speech to the opening ceremony of the World Artificial Intelligence Conference (WAIC) in Shanghai, Xi urged countries to seize the “historic opportunity” of open-source AI, and pledged to help developing nations build AI capabilities, warning against the emergence of “new historical injustices” from unequal access to the technology.

The remarks amounted to Xi’s clearest articulation yet of China’s ambition to shape global AI governance, framing its open-source models as a global public good and positioning Beijing as an alternative to Washington at a pivotal moment in the race for technological leadership.

Comparing AI’s significance to the invention of the steam engine and electricity, Xi outlined a vision in which China shares AI technology and expertise with countries across the Global South, while leading global efforts to create standards governing the emerging technology.

The speech pitched China’s AI coalition as a rival to the U.S.-led “Pax Silica” international initiative to secure global AI and critical mineral supply chains, though Xi avoided naming Washington. Chinese state media has increasingly portrayed Beijing’s AI strategy as a response to what it calls a U.S.-led attempt to erect an “AI Iron Curtain.”

In a commentary published on Thursday, Yu Yuan Tiantian, a prominent social media account affiliated with state broadcaster CCTV, said China was seeking to build “another order” by “pooling the strength of all humanity and all countries to build an open-source, all-factor AI ecosystem.”

The WAIC conference underlined the shifting AI landscape, with Chinese open-weight AI models making rapid gains against proprietary systems from U.S. companies such as OpenAI and Anthropic.

Beijing-based startup Moonshot AI on Friday unveiled Kimi K3, which it described as the world’s largest open AI model by parameter count, a month after the U.S. government abruptly pulled Anthropic’s frontier-class AI models due to security concerns.

Reuters reported earlier this month that Beijing is weighing restrictions on overseas access to some of China’s leading AI models, highlighting the growing tension between its promotion of open-source AI and an increasingly stringent national security agenda.

Xi also called for AI systems to remain under human control and urged countries to establish early-warning and emergency-response mechanisms to manage AI risks, in his clearest remarks to date on AI safety.

Gaza: Israeli strikes kill 8 people attending funeral of earlier attack’s victim

Reuters
Cairo, July 17

AN ISRAELI airstrike killed at least eight Palestinians and wounded 20 attending a funeral in Nuseirat in the central Gaza Strip on Friday for a person killed by another Israeli strike on the area earlier in the day, Gaza health officials said.

Those deaths, along with at least three Palestinians killed in separate Israeli airstrikes elsewhere in the enclave, brought Friday’s toll to at least 12, medics said.

Hamas condemned the Nuseirat strike as a “brutal massacre” against mourners and urged mediators, as well as the United Nations, to act to halt Israeli attacks in Gaza.

The Israeli military said it was checking a Reuters request for comment but did not immediately provide one.

Residents in an area east of Deir al-Balah in the central Gaza Strip said Israeli forces used drones to broadcast audio messages ordering them to leave their homes, forcing some families to flee for safety.

The deaths add to a toll of more than 1,100 Palestinians, mostly civilians, killed by Israeli attacks since an October ceasefire, opens new tab between Israel and Hamas militants took effect, according to Gaza health officials.

The truce halted major fighting but has not stopped near-daily Israeli strikes. Israel says it is targeting militants.

Ex-PM who led Israel out of Lebanon fears mistakes are being repeated

Melanie Lidman
Jerusalem, July 17

IT WAS just before sunrise when the last columns of Israeli tanks crossed from Lebanon back into Israel and then Prime Minister Ehud Barak, who ordered the withdrawal, said the homecoming of Israeli troops sent “shivers down his spine.”

That was May 24, 2000, the day Israel ended its 18-year occupation of southern Lebanon.

By then, many Israelis had grown to view the invasion — initially aimed at ousting Palestinian militants — as a strategic failure, akin to the U.S. military quagmire in Vietnam.

Now, 26 years later, Israel is again occupying much of southern Lebanon, and while polling

Israeli soldiers at the entrance to Beaufort Castle, southern Lebanon shows that a majority of Israelis currently support an extended military presence in Lebanon, some, including Barak, are afraid that Israel is falling into the same trap.

“Our very presence will become the only goal,” Barak said in a recent interview, recounting what he said he thought of the occupation in 1985, when he was a general in the Israeli military, and Israel was shifting from active fighting to long-term deployment in Lebanon.

“We will protect our fortresses, we will protect our convoys of supply, the logistics, the patrols, everything,” he said he warned. “But we were not serving the state. There was no logic to this in 1985, and there was no logic in 2000, when we pulled out.”

Barak, who served as Israel’s military chief before coming PM, still considers the pullout one of his proudest achievements. As a general, he recalls visiting soldiers stationed in Lebanon in the early 1980s. He said they told him, “We are fighting to remove the threat from Hezbollah so that our children will be safe and won’t have to serve here.” But when Barak ordered the withdrawal nearly two decades later, he said some of the children of those same soldiers were serving in Lebanon. ‘King of the North’ Andy Burnham set to become next British PM

London, July 17

ANDY BURNHAM, nicknamed the “King of the North”, was elected leader of Britain’s governing Labour Party on Friday, the final step before becoming its seventh prime minister in a decade on a pledge to thwart the rise of the populist Reform UK.

Burnham, who earned the regal moniker for his determination as mayor of Greater Manchester to defend the region’s interests, told a special conference on Friday he was ready for power and would work to offer hope to people in “forgotten places everywhere”.

around, the 56-year-old promised to spread power away from Westminster, the heart of British politics, to the nation’s regions and preside over a united team to deliver the change the country was “crying out for”.

“We are united and we put the power that comes from that unity at the service of people and places who have been waiting too long for politics to let them hope again,” he told a room full of Labour lawmakers and party officials. “And that’s what we’re going to do, everybody, we’re going to give them hope back.”

He also paid tribute to Keir Starmer, the man he will replace as prime minister on Monday, when the party will be eager to find out his cabinet team and learn more about his approach to government.

Despite repeating his offer to hand power to regions and to be decidedly pro-business, there is still much to know about Burnham’s policy priorities.

France, Germany expand defence ties as Europe seeks military autonomy

Reuters
Bruehl, July 17

THE LEADERS of Germany and France pledged on Friday to deepen defence cooperation and counter intense economic competition from China, which they said was exerting drastic pressure on Europe through overcapacity and an undervalued currency.

German Chancellor Friedrich Merz and French President Emmanuel Macron met as part of a regular series of joint cabinet meetings, looking to get past tensions over the collapse of a joint fighter jet project earlier this year.

“We are doing what is necessary to safeguard our freedom, our security and our collective defence,” Merz told a joint press conference at which the two outlined a list of objectives including missile defence and long-range strike systems.

Both leaders took aim at China, which they said was not respecting the rules of international trade by offering at least eight times the level of state support to its industry seen in other countries in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Macron said France would maintain full responsibility for paying for its nuclear deterrent.

Russia detains blogger who criticised Putin, Ukraine war

Moscow: Russian authorities have detained a blogger who criticised President Vladimir Putin and the war in Ukraine, as Moscow sends a warning signal to critics of the Kremlin ahead of September’s parliamentary election.

The blogger, Ilya Remeslo, was detained on Friday on suspicion of the offence of spreading false information about the Russian army, the TASS state news agency reported.

Previously a pro-Kremlin figure, Remeslo published a manifesto that went viral on social media in March entitled “Five reasons why I stopped supporting Vladimir Putin”. REUTERS

• IN THE TOURNAMENT’S FIRST FOUR WEEKS, BEER SALES IN BARS, RESTAURANTS, STADIUMS AND OTHER VENUES ROSE 14 PER CENT

World Cup beer sales are hopping; brewers hope stout demand outlasts tournament

Dee-Ann Durbin
July 17

THE WORLD Cup has been a bonanza for beer in the US Bars in Boston reported emergency deliveries to keep taps from running dry on some game days.

Fans downed 290,000 stadium beers during six matches in Philadelphia, FIFA organizers said. But all that frothy foam obscures a cold reality: beer sales have been struggling globally, and it’s unclear if soccer’s world championship can reverse the trend despite three countries and 16 cities co-hosting this year. In the US, beer consumption has fallen steadily for a decade, according to the Brewers Association, a trade group for craft brewers. Canada has seen a similar decline, the national statistics agency says.

The Brewers of Europe trade association reports the same story across the European Union. Many consumers are cutting back on alcohol for health reasons; last year was the first time in Gallup polling that a majority of Americans — 53% — said drinking “one or two drinks a day” was bad for one’s health.

Sales of nonalcoholic beer have grown but still make up only around 1% of the U.S. market, the Beer Institute says. Economic worries have also taken a toll: U.S. consumption of all types of alcohol — including wine and spirits — fell 5% last year, with affordability concerns partly to blame, beverage market researcher IWSR said. Craig Purser, president and CEO of the National Beer Wholesalers Association, suggested smartphones and streaming services have pulled people away from socializing with a cold beer in hand.

“If you have this behavior where we’re cooconing and we’re not spending time with other folks, that’s going to affect beer consumption,” he said.

Boston Beer Co. Founder and CEO Jim Koch

Enter the World Cup and fans who travelled from around the world to support their teams and engage in communal celebration or sorrow. In the tournament’s first four weeks, beer sales in bars, restaurants, stadiums and other venues rose 14% in US host cities compared with the same period last year, the Beer Institute reported.

The bump extended beyond host cities; sales were up 4% nationally. Jim Koch, brewer, founder and CEO of the Boston Beer Co., which makes Samuel Adams, said the company made two emergency deliveries to its Sam Adams Boston Taproom on the first day Scotland’s fans were in town.

“At one point, we were pouring them a Sam Adams Boston Lager every 12 seconds. What a wonderful group of people,” he said. Koch added he didn’t see people on their phones; they had beers in hand and were talking to each other, doing “what beer is meant to do,” helping people enjoy each other’s company.

The plentiful drinking on display in stadiums contrasted with the World Cup in Qatar four years ago, where the government banned alcoholic beer sales in match venues. Brewers leaned heavily into this year’s tournament.

AB InBev, the World Cup’s official beer sponsor, provided marketing support to bars and hosted 200,000 watch parties in 40 countries. Molson Coors said it would spend 60% more than last year on marketing in June and July and debuted a limited-edition soccer ball that can hold 12 cans of Miller Lite. Maybell Romero, a law professor at Tulane University who usually prefers cocktails, said she opts for beer during the World Cup because it has lower alcohol content and matches can be all-day affairs.

Watching matches at bars in Mexico City, she enjoyed trying new beers with novel ingredients like champagne yeast. She expects to return mostly to cocktails after the tournament. Beer consumption was expected to fall in some markets even before the World Cup ended. AP

ON DAY 20 of his hunger strike, activist Sonam Wangchuk said that he remained "very strong" from the inside, and would "stay alive at any cost" until Monday, the first day of the Monsoon Session, when the protesters intend to march to Parliament.

Among those who visited the protest site on Friday were NCP (Sharad Pawar) MP Supriya Sule, Congress MP Pawan Khara, and former Union Minister Ashwani Kumar.

the morning. "I will stay alive until July 20 at any cost. If you don't come [for the march] and July 20 is not successful, I will come back as a ghost," he said in a lighter vein. Wangchuk's personal physician Dr Satish Lamba told reporters that he continued to lose weight and show "signs of mild dehydration" but was mentally alert and his parameters were normal.

"We are worried about his health. This is an apathetic government that does not understand the language of democratic protest. And if we are protesting against such a government, our protest techniques should also evolve," Khara said.

On Thursday, Congress general secretary (Organisation) K C Venugopal had said the party shared "the anguish and outrage" that Wangchuk felt, and appealed to him to end his fast.

THE GOVERNMENT is working on a new contributory pension scheme for unorganised and formal sector workers that would accumulate contributions over time, and be invested in long-term government-backed securities, with annual crediting of interest. At the age of 60 years, the scheme may allow the proposed "Target Retirement Sum (TRS)" to be converted into pension, based on prevailing annuity and interest rates, a senior government official told The Indian Express.

Japan ex-minister claims 'recklessness' on bullet train project, India rejects HOURS AFTER a former Japanese minister alleged on social media that India had displayed "sheer recklessness" in its bullet train project that stalled its progress, the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) rejected the claim as a "personal opinion...at variance with facts" and said discussions between both countries were progressing well.

Talking to X on the Mumbai-Ahmedabad High Speed Rail (MAHSR) project, Hideki Maki-

● WEST INDIES GREAT WAS NAMED ONE OF FIVE 'CRICKETERS OF THE CENTURY' BY WISDEN IN 2000

Legendary all-rounder with many firsts: 'He didn't know how special he was'

Sriram Veera
Mumbai, July 17

SIR GARFIELD Sobers, better known as Garry Sobers, who died on Friday, 11 days short of his 90th birthday, never quite grasped his greatness.

Charlie Davis, who batted with him for the West Indies, once explained the problem. "He was too modest. He didn't know how special he was. He expected us to bat like him. And catch like him. He thought all of us were like him," he recalled in an earlier conversation with The Indian Express.

"He would come in and say,

"I will get a 150, Kanhai, you give me a 100, Charlie, you give me a 75". That was it. That was the plan. No self-doubt," he said.

The plan usually worked, though only one man could ever keep his end of it.

A few years before his death in 2023, Salim Durani, the flamboyant Indian all-rounder who shared the field with Sobers through the 1960s and 1970s, told The Indian Express: "What a player he was. And itna simple aadmi (such a simple man)."

Sobers was born in July 1936 in a small wooden house on Walcott Avenue in Barbados's capital Bridgetown, with an extra finger on each hand. His father, a merchant seaman, went down with his torpedoe ship in January 1942. Sobers was five then.

At 14, he was running errands in a furniture factory. Nobody ever coached him; he learned everything in the street games of St Michael.

At 21, his maiden Test hundred against Pakistan did not end until 365, past Len Hutton's world record; it stood for 36 years until Brian Lara crossed it.

Sobers bowled fast-medium, orthodox spin, wrist-spin, whatever the moment needed. At Swansea in 1968, he hit Malcolm Nash for six sixes in an over, the first man to do it in first-class cricket. In 93 Tests, he made 8,032 runs at 57.78 and took 235 wickets.

{ SIR GARFIELD SOBERS • 1936-2026 }

But the numbers hardly tell the full story.

There was a phase in his career when he made three centuries in a home series against England. The motivation was a friend and teammate whose death he felt responsible for.

In September 1959, at quarter to five in the morning, driving through the night to a London charity match, Sobers came around a bend into the headlights of a 10-ton cattle truck. Fast bowler Tom Dewdney was in the passenger seat and Collie Smith, his closest friend, lay asleep across the back seat.

Smith's spine was broken. "Don't worry about me," he told Sobers. "Look after the big fellow;" he meant the burly Dewdney.

Smith died three days later. He was 26.

Sobers was fined 10 pounds for careless driving and began drinking, before deciding that disappearing into the bottle would be a second betrayal. He resolved to bat for two men from then on, Garfield Sobers and Collie Smith.

Davis, who played under Sobers and watched him from 22 yards for years, once said: "He is not normal. He is definitely not normal."

He never stopped being astonished by him. "Garry could catch a blur, you know. He used to be close at leg slip, at the back pocket of the batsman, and catch blurs."

At Melbourne in 1971-72, when he was playing for the World XI, Sobers was bounced out by a young Dennis Lillee for a duck. That evening, Sobers found Ian Chappell in the Australian dressing room. "You've got a boy here called Lillee. Tell him I can bowl quick too."

He bounced Lillee back, and Chappell later told him Lillee had smashed his bat against the wall, swearing he hadn't really bowled quick at him yet.

"He's got the ball, I've got the bat," Sobers said. "I've never met the one who can scare me," »CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

SC allows release of animated film on Lord Jagannath after Yatra

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

THE SUPREME Court Friday allowed the release of an animated film, Mahaprabhu Jagannath, on or after July 28, after the Rath Yatra concludes, after hearing a plea by its producer challenging the July 15 Odisha High Court order staying its screenings.

The film was previously scheduled for release on July 17.

Appearing for the producer, Ele Animations Private Limited, Senior Advocate Devadatt Kamat urged a two-judge bench presided by Justice B V Nagarathna, also comprising Justice R Mahadevan, to permit its release on Friday itself, given the huge investment involved and the fact that theatres had already been hired.

Kamat pointed out that the film, meant for children, was based on a long-running TV series and had been cleared by the Central Board of Film Certification (CBFC).

However, the court declined the request. “Don’t do it during Rath Yatra... You can release it after Rath Yatra,” said Justice Nagarathna.

The Odisha HC came on PIL seeking directions to restrain the filmmakers from public exhibition, screening, or releasing the film within Odisha.

The PIL said Ele Animations released the teaser on its YouTube channel on June 6, announcing the film’s July 10 release. Several people, including the Shree Jagannath Temple Administration, questioned its title and content, following which it was screened for the temple administration and the Gajapati Maharaja of Puri.

Though some objections were raised about the content, the producer announced its release on July 17, the PIL said, adding this was done without making the suggested changes.

The filmmakers argued that the film included a disclaimer stating it is a work of fiction with no connection to reality, and that there was no attempt to undermine devotees’ beliefs.

Karnataka SIR

lagged on this front.

Through the creation of previously non-existent grassroots party infrastructure in the form of over 54,000 Booth Level Agents (BLAs) to mobilise voter enrolment, holding of mass enrolment drives and with innovations like issuance of PRC by the state government — on the lines of domicile certificates issued for admissions to professional education institutions in Karnataka — the Congress has tried to sustain its vote base in the state.

The party has also consistently driven home that voters risk losing out on welfare guarantee schemes if they don’t clear the SIR.

The last such intensive revision of electoral rolls in Karnataka was conducted in 2002. After the first round of SIR, 5.08 crore voters were mapped to the 2002 list, leaving around 46.5 lakh voters. On Wednesday, EC extended SIR by two weeks in the state, with the enumeration deadline now August 8. The draft list is to be published on August 17, objections can be filed till September 16, and the final rolls will be out on October 19.

Amid the crossfire of political allegations, Karnataka Chief Electoral Officer V Anbukumar said on July 8: “We want to assure the (SIR) exercise is being carried out as per EC directions.”

Since June, the Congress has put its MLAs and workers to work to ensure enrolment of all eligible voters. Besides organising camps to assist voters in filling enumeration forms, the Karnataka government announced on June 29 the issue of PRCs by the Revenue Department.

The BJP has accused the Congress of trying to “protect” illegal immigrants and its support base through the PRC, with its state president B Y Vijayendra describing the government’s plan as a “devious strategy.”

However, the Congress points out that it is merely facilitating the issuance of a document recognised by the EC for the SIR process. The EC includes the PRC as one of 12 documents that may be used to verify an elector’s or parent’s place and date of birth.

The government order of June 29 talks of establishing “a uniform, transparent and legally sustainable framework for issuance of Permanent Residence Certificates and Domicile Certificates”. The order says the PRCs may be issued after local authorities are satisfied, following enquiry and verification, that an applicant is a genuine and permanent resident of Karnataka. Eligibility may be established through criteria such as birth in Karnataka, 10 years of residence by parents or guardians, 10 years of schooling in the state, ownership of residential property, or government records including electoral rolls, Aadhaar, ration cards and land records.

On July 8, Union Minister of State Shobha Karandlaje wrote to Union Home Minister Amit Shah seeking intervention to halt the Karnataka government’s introduction of PRC.

Responding to Karandlaje’s letter, Hariprasad accused the BJP of using the issue selectively. “In Assam, 30 lakh people were identified through the NRC (National Register of Citizens) and CAA (Citizenship Amendment Act), out of which 21 lakh Hindus were going to be expelled. So they abandoned it there. They are saying Bangladeshis for politics. The BJP is playing a trick to abandon the real voters of India,” he said.

The Congress government’s facilitation of mass enrolment camps has become another point of contention. The BJP and JD(S) have complained to the EC that BLOs are distributing and collecting forms at public venues instead of conducting mandatory door-to-door verification. Union Minister and former Karnataka CM H D Kumaraswamy has said SIR guidelines require personal household verification.

In defence, the Congress argues that the EC permits forms to be filled at public places. Hariprasad said camps had been organised in community halls, mosques and temples because many BLOs were unable to visit slum areas. “How can illiterate and poor people complete this process on their own?” he asked.

Following concerns within BJP over its preparedness, party leaders have reportedly accelerated its appointments too. According to party sources, BJP is now only around 3,000 BLAs short of the Congress’s strength.

corporate social responsibility (CSR) or third-party funds, the officials said.

The EPFO proposes to give the flexibility to the worker at the age of 55 years to decide the purpose for his or her retirement savings. “Till that time, it will operate like PF, you keep on accumulating. At that stage when you are retiring, it converts into an annuity or a systematic withdrawal plan,” the official said.

Under the proposed pension plan, each member will have an individual pension account. “The system will compute the proposed Target Retirement Sum (TRS) dynamically based on the member’s chosen pension goal and expected retirement age. Members will have personalised dashboards showing total contributions, real-time corpus status, and progress towards the TRS for applicable schemes,” another official said.

The system will project the required contribution amount and frequency to achieve the declared TRS. “Adjustments to TRS will be allowed and contribution requirements could then be re-computed accordingly. The system will accept and categorise contributions from multiple sources such as members, employers, or third parties and update the member’s pension balance,” the official said.

When asked if this would be along the lines of the National Pension System (NPS), one of the officials cited above said the NPS is “purely annuity based, while Indian Express @ 4:00 a.m. <https://whatsapp.com/channel/0029Van2VRb6RGJKOH6oBd0F> the proposed pension scheme will be more flexible, risk free and based on real and not notional returns”, “We want to make it similar to the PF which continues with only the contributions being stopped because you are retired, so you will not have any contribution. It will then be a systematic withdrawal plan on the basis of your expected monthly pension payout. So, it can be equal to the interest that you want, in which case, the corpus will remain the same. For example, if 8% interest is declared and that 8% over Rs 1 crore is translating to Rs 8 lakh, so you divide it by 12 and that becomes your pension payout every month,” the official explained.

Elaborating further, the official said, “If you want higher in the initial stage, then it will be a drawdown from your principal. So, based on your longevity, you estimate that in 20 years you want to have a good pension, you can increase your drawdown. At the same time, you can reduce your drawdown. If you reduce your drawdown, your interest will get added to your principal. So, towards the later part, it becomes almost like an inflation-linked plan where towards the later part, you can have a higher payout. This is what we are thinking about.”

The flexibility to decide the amount for pension payouts or the drawdown will be given to the member. “The EPFO 3.0 system will allow users to simulate pension amounts based on parameters such as age, corpus, interest rate, and retirement age. It will also include additional input fields for voluntary contributions and contribution frequency. The system will provide inflation-adjusted projections as an optional feature. The estimated monthly pension, projected corpus at retirement, and comparative graphs will be displayed to the member, allowing multiple scenario comparisons for decision making taking into account variable contributions and multiple employment scenarios,” the official said.

The scheme also proposes family and survivor pensions for spouse, children, and orphans funded through a pooled “Family Benefit Fund”, managed on actuarial principles, the official said. Members of EPF, GPF, and other provident funds could also be allowed to transfer balances into the new pension initiative to enhance retirement savings, the official added.

The EPFO 3.0 reforms will bring new tech features and an upgradation to the core banking solution (CBS), and pave the way for PF contributions for all unorganised sector workers and gig workers, in line with the Code on Social Security that brings gig and platform workers into the social security net for the first time. The Code mandates aggregator contributions of 1-2% of annual turnover for social security, with the total contribution not exceeding 5% of the amount payable by the aggregator.

The retirement fund models of other countries such as Singapore are being studied to incorporate the best practices, the official said. Singapore’s social security scheme, Central Provident Fund (CPF), a deferred annuity scheme, sets aside savings not just for retirement but also for housing and healthcare. Singaporeans do not rely on individual CPF contributions alone for their retirement income as apart from a contribution of 20% of the salary to CPF, individual efforts are supplemented by employers, loved ones and the government, as per the information on the Singapore government website. Unlike pension schemes in other countries, CPF members earn an interest of up to 6% for those aged 55 and above, and 5% for those aged below 55.

While the new social security coverage scheme will make use of the EPFO’s digital infrastructure, the nodal agency for the implementation of the social security scheme is yet to be finalised by the Ministry of Labour and Employment.

As the EPFO expects around 2.5 crore gig workers and building and other construction workers (BOCW) over the next five years, the scheme is also being designed keeping in mind their inclusion into social security coverage for the first time. The scheme will incorporate “one-to-many mapping” where one UAN (Universal Account Number) will be registered with multiple employers and aggregators, showing total PF and pension contributions from all sources for these workers while maintaining their employer-wise breakdowns.

The EPFO system plans to allow third-party contributions like NGOs, individuals, donor organisations, CSR and track all contributions under each UAN with a configurable upper limit.

our concerns and that of other Opposition parties as well”, Venugopal posted on X. “Rest assured, we will continue to confront the Modi government and demand the Education Minister’s resignation.”

Wangchuk and the activist group Cockroach Janta Party (CJP) have been demanding that Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan should take responsibility for the leak of the NEET-UG question paper in May, and leave his post.

Sule said on Friday that “the fight” would be fought in “Parliament as well”, and that the Opposition would raise the concerns of students in the House. “This issue is above politics, it is about our children. We shall remain united,” she said.

The CPI(M) expressed concern over Wangchuk’s health and criticised the government for not opening talks with the protesters.

“The Union Government’s refusal to interact with the protesting leaders and students underlines its great insensitivity and authoritarian character... The CPI(M) reiterates its demand for the immediate resignation of Dharmendra Pradhan, scrapping of the NTA and NEP 2020,” the Politburo said in a statement.

Following a directive from the Delhi High Court on Thursday that Wangchuk’s health should be monitored by government doctors, the Centre has designated Dr Ram Manohar Lohia Hospital and Safdarjung hospital for the job. “We have been directed to start the services Saturday onwards. A team of doctors will visit the concerned person and monitor his health closely,” a source said.

Dehydration is a serious challenge for the body during a long fast, and can lead to salt imbalance, which impacts other organ systems. “Dehydration can affect all organs. Malnutrition and lack of energy can lead to these systems slowly shutting down,” Dr B K Tripathi, former head of the department of medicine at Safdarjung hospital, said.

Also, long fasts can lead to a condition called starvation ketoacidosis which, if it is not reversed quickly, can turn serious. “When there is a lack of calories, the body starts utilising protein reserves. When the proteins are broken down, ketones are produced as a byproduct. This changes the pH of the body, which is linked to several bodily processes, all of which get affected,” Dr Tripathi said.

Dr Hans Raj, former head of the medicine department at RML too spoke of potential starvation ketoacidosis. “In such a state, the patient requires immediate hospitalisation. They have to be given nutrition through a nasal tube and hydration through IV fluids. The salts have to be balanced immediately,” he said.

Bullet train

The Japanese politician also alleged that the recent visit to India by Japan Prime minister Sanae Takaichi was a failure. “I feel 100% that the reason this has not moved forward is entirely on the Indian side. No result from Prime Minister Takaichi’s visit either — ‘India Shinkansen’ failure: Japan excluded from the signal system, the key to safety,” he posted.

Responding to the allegations, MEA spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal said: “It is an individual opinion and at considerable variance with facts. India-Japan discussions on Mumbai-Ahmedabad High Speed train are in fact progressing well. Japan will provide E10 series trains, but only in the early 2030s. The train in question is still under development. Meanwhile, construction work has rapidly progressed. The first section will be opened in 2027 itself. Therefore, both sides agreed to start the operations with Indian high speed trains.”

Jaiswal said signalling equipment has been ordered and is in line with international specifications. “No Japanese offer was received in this context. The project execution is in line with the common goal of starting the high speed train project at the earliest,” he said.

Golchha

1993-batch IPS officer Robin Hibu, the second-most senior officer in the Delhi Police, continues to serve as Special Commissioner of Police (Human Resource Division) at the Police Headquarters.

Golchha also belongs to the AGMUT cadre. According to the MHA order, Golchha has been directed to report to the Lieutenant Governor’s office, where he will await his next posting. Golchha, who retires in 2027, is learnt to have reported to the L-G’s office later in the day.

Golchha had taken charge in August last year, just a day after a man attacked Delhi CM Rekha Gupta at her camp office at a Jan Sunwai programme, injuring her. Golchha (58) was serving as the Director General of Tihar Jail at the time of his appointment. He took over the Delhi top job from S B K Singh, who held the post for 21 days.

According to sources, the Centre had asked Golchha to follow the procedures put in place by Sanjay Arora. During his tenure, sources said, Arora had issued several orders aimed at bringing more transparency to administrative postings. In one such order, he mandated a cooling-off period before SHOs could be considered for reposting to the same posts. He also set up a Central Police Establishment Board to interview suitable inspectors for appointment as SHOs.

“In Arora’s tenure, interviews of inspectors were conducted by a board comprising four Special Commissioners of Police. The names of inspectors who cleared the first stage were then placed before Arora, who made the final appointments after consulting other Special CPs,” sources said.

Sources said the process changed after Golchha took charge. “After repeated reminders, Golchha announced the formation of a Police Establishment Board last December on similar lines,” the source said.

The Centre is also understood to have been unhappy with the handling of the Cockroach Janta Party protest at Jantar Mantar which, sources said, “could have been handled more professionally”. Government sources also cited the Centre’s unhappiness with the rising number of corruption cases in the Delhi Police, including the recent arrest of two Delhi Police inspectors by the CBI.

Temple

error of judgment, but of deliberate negligence on the part of some people. Sensitive work involving public donations was entrusted through ad-hoc recruitment, with relatives and acquaintances of Trust functionaries finding their way into the system. The backgrounds of all such recruits are being verified and their financial records are also being examined,” a senior police officer in Ayodhya said.

According to investigators, CCTV footage has provided direct evidence against six of the eight arrested accused, allegedly showing them concealing bundles of currency notes inside their clothes, pockets and shoes while counting donations at the temple’s Pilgrim Facilitation Centre.

The alleged theft came to light after discrepancies in donation accounting prompted the temple administration to seek a police investigation. The UP government subsequently constituted an SIT even as the Trust general secretary Champat Rai and trustee Anil Mishra resigned amid mounting scrutiny.

On June 25, UP Police registered an FIR in the case on a complaint by the Trust and arrested eight men: Avinash Shukla, Lavkush Mishra, Anu-kalp Mishra, Manish Kumar Yadav, Karunesh Pandey, Ramashankar Mishra, Ram Shankar Yadav alias Tinnu Yadav, and Subhash Srivastav. Tinnu Yadav is Champat Rai’s former driver; Manish Yadav is Tinnu’s nephew.

The arrests and the widening probe follow the findings detailed in a nine-page preliminary report submitted by the SIT in the case, which concluded that the alleged thefts were not isolated acts but were enabled by serious systemic failures in supervision, security and cash-handling procedures.

The report also found:

- At least 70 instances of alleged theft or embezzlement in CCTV footage preserved between April 27 and June 6, 2026.
- CCTV recordings retained for only 45 days, despite earlier audit recommendations that footage be preserved for 180 days, making it difficult to determine whether the pilferage had begun even earlier.
- Repeated instances of employees hiding bundles of notes and loose cash inside their clothing, shoes and other concealed areas, with colleagues in some cases appearing to assist or shield them.
- Tinnu Yadav allegedly controlled the keys of donation boxes and access arrangements without any written authorisation. Counting supervisor Subhash Srivastava was responsible for allowing such informal arrangements to continue.
- Basic security protocols diluted or ignored: staff not frisked properly while entering or leaving the counting room; personal belongings allowed inside the counting room; denomination-wise accounting of cash was often not maintained; and, donations from hundis mixed together before counting instead of being processed separately, weakening audit trails.
- Change in security protocol: mandatory frisking introduced in September 2024 was diluted by an SoP issued on February 6, 2025, which permitted only random or periodic checks; even these limited checks were often not conducted.
- Weak oversight by Trust representatives involved in framing these procedures; little evidence of sustained supervision or compliance review despite presence of Trust and bank representatives during counting.

position for nearly 10 minutes, with the lion sitting on my legs, it got up and I ran home.”

Escaping from two broken fingers and a gash on his neck, Parmar, who has six children and rears six cows, says he doesn’t blame the lion. “The animal harms us only if we harass it.”

As concern grows over the lion attacks, this is what experts underline too, as do maldharis such as Parmar who refer to the animal as saavaj and have lived in close proximity with it for generations. However, as expanding human imprint makes the chances of these encounters more common, that understanding is wearing thin.

Gujarat remains the only natural habitat of Asiatic lions in the world, with the core area being the Gir forest, covering Junagadh and Gir Somnath districts in Saurashtra.

Principal Chief Conservator of Forests and Chief Wildlife Warden, Gujarat, Jaipal Singh says: “The attacks seem to have happened for different reasons, some of them due to lions being harassed. But we can’t pinpoint the exact reason (behind the surge).”

While the 31 captured lions have been relocated to areas where there are no lion prides, Singh adds: “We do not release these confirmed man-eaters.” He puts the number of man-eaters, who are eventually put in zoos, at six or seven, adding that they want the study with the WIIT to understand and guide us on this change of behaviour (of lions) and the precautions to be taken.” Singh also underlines that none of the lions shifted or declared man-eater was involved in more than one attack.

A senior forest officer says what is particularly worrying is that in many cases, the man-eaters have “consumed” people. “Generally, humans are not a part of a lion’s diet,” the officer says.

However, Rajkot-based Bhushan Pandya, a former member of the Gujarat State Board for Wildlife, says the designation as man-eaters is “unreasonable”. “As per guidelines of the National Tiger Conservation Authority, a tiger is considered a man-eater only when it repeatedly kills people and consumes them. Not if it does it once. If a lion has killed a person after the latter harassed it, it should not be called a man-eater. This is being done to pacify people, but it is not proper for wildlife management.”

Dushyant Vasavada, who worked as Chief Conservator of Forests (Junagadh Wildlife Circle) before his retirement, says capturing a lion can also “shatter” a pride. However, he says, the authorities have their hands tied. “A lion is captured as a precautionary measure. What if the same lion is not captured and it kills another human being? It is a process. There is no other way.”

Are lions to blame?

No, says Vasavada, putting the blame squarely on humans. “Man has gone into the area of the lion and is disturbing it. In most of the reported cases, lions were harassed. In Liliya, a youth was killed when he tried to capture mating lions on his phone. In Palitana, the lion attacked (Parmar) after it was harassed in a nearby village where it had captured a prey. In Girnar, a lion killed a boy after people flashed lights at it,” says Vasavada.

Forest Minister Arjun Modhwadia also says that in almost all the recent cases of lion attacks, the harassment was from the human side, adding that in the Liliya incident, the friends of the man killed would be investigated. The Forest Department has “zero tolerance” in such cases, he adds. “Earlier, action was taken against a person for holding ‘lion shows’ (the practice of ensuring a lion does not move away to give tourists a good sighting).”

Too many lions?

Vasavada dismisses this contention. “Lions have expanded their territory only when there have been favourable conditions,” he says, be it safety or food, underlining that the animal usually does not venture into populated areas.

As per the government’s five-yearly Lion Population Estimation, the number of lions in Gujarat increased from 674 in 2020 to 891 in 2025. More crucially, the core area holds just 394 of them, with 497 disbursed in satellite populations in different parts of the region.

What’s the solution

Pandya says the Forest Department should resume mobile patrolling at night to check activities like ‘lion shows’, often organised by owners of the fly-by-night hotels. He also advocates giving wider powers to forest officials. “Scientific management of Greater Gir (lion landscape outside its core area) is required.”

ANURAG KUMAR IS A 1994-BATCH AGMUT CADRE IPS OFFICER

Homecoming for new top cop Kumar, back to Delhi Police after 20 years with IB

Alok Singh
New Delhi, July 17

ANURAG KUMAR, a 1994-batch AGMUT (Arunachal Pradesh, Goa, Mizoram, and Union Territories) cadre IPS officer, had last served in the Delhi Police as the Deputy Commissioner of Police (North) in 2005 before moving to the Intelligence Bureau (IB). On Friday, he had a homecoming of sorts as he was appointed as the Delhi Police Commissioner. A native of Prayagraj in UP, Kumar holds a B Tech degree. He joined the Delhi Police in September 1994 and served in various capacities, including as Assistant Commissioner of Police (ACP) and Deputy Commissioner of Police (DCP). In 2005, while serving as DCP (North), he was deputed to the Intelligence Bureau, where he remained for over 20 years before returning to his parent AGMUT cadre on repatriation. He was posted at the Headquarters in Delhi, and looked after Jammu and Kashmir before the current posting. During his tenure as DCP (North), Kumar drew praise from his seniors for overseeing the security arrangements at the Red Fort during the Independence Day celebrations in 2005, said sources. Right before that, he was posted as the Additional DCP in Northeast Delhi. Officers, who earlier worked with him during his tenure with the Delhi Police, recall him as a “highly professional officer with strong operational policing skills and sound strategic planning”. An officer said, “With his appointment, it is expected that the force will become more professional. He is known for his honesty, integrity, and professionalism.” Kumar’s father was a judge of the Allahabad High Court. He still has five years of service left before retirement. While serving in IB, Kumar was awarded the Police Medal for Meritorious Service in 2010 and the President’s Police Medal for Distinguished Service in 2016. During his tenure, he was associated with several national and international operations. Kumar will be holding a key meeting with officers on Saturday. Three other IPS officers from his 1994 batch—Rajesh Khurana, Garima Bhatnagar and Neeraj Thakur—are currently serving at the Delhi Police Headquarters as Special Commissioners of Police. Robin Hibu of the 1993 batch, his senior, is also serving as Special Commissioner of Police (Human Resources). Meanwhile, sources said that Satish Golchha, following his removal as Delhi’s police chief, reported to the Lieutenant Governor’s Secretariat on Friday. The procedure, sources said, was similar to that followed for subordinate police personnel who are sent to their respective district lines after being relieved of their assignments. Sources added that Golchha is likely to “await posting” until the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) issues further orders.

Court allowed NEET paper leak accused to take retest, but NTA withholds result

Nirbhay Thakur
New Delhi, July 17

THE NATIONAL Testing Agency (NTA) has withheld the NEET-UG result of Yash Yadav, an accused in the leak of the medical entrance examination question paper, The Indian Express has learned. The NTA, which conducts the competitive exam, had announced on May 12 that the 2026 NEET-UG, which was held on May 3, was cancelled because of the leak. A re-examination was held on June 21, the result of which was announced Thursday. Yash Yadav was arrested on May 13. The CBI, which is probing the case, alleged that Yadav had received PDF files of the leaked question papers through the secure messaging application Telegram, and sold them for Rs 10 lakh. Investigators alleged that Yadav, who had himself appeared for the May 3 exam, was instrumental in distributing the “leaked” paper. On June 16, a Delhi court had allowed Yadav to appear for the retest on June 21, saying the allegations against him could not be grounds to deny him the right to take the examination. “...While the applicant (Yadav) does face grave allegations of wrongful dissemination and trading of confidential questions of the very examination in which he now seeks to appear, his rights as a student cannot be defeated by turning bail into punishment by denial of the opportunity to appear in the examination,” Special Judge Dr Vishal Gagne of Rouse Avenue Court said in his order of June 16. This was “more so when the eligibility, candidature and selection of any student in an examination is subject to appropriate orders from the competent authorities...” the court said.

A hurried, unusual transition at HQ

Sakshi Chand
New Delhi, July 17

AROUND 10.40 AM on Friday, Delhi Police Commissioner Satish Golchha was participating in a Van Mahotsav plantation drive at the Ridge alongside Delhi Environment Minister Manjinder Singh Sirsa and senior officers. It was a usual public engagement, one among many that mark the daily routine of the Delhi Police Commissioner. During this routine event, however, the Capital saw an abrupt transition. While saplings were being planted and watered, a government order appointing 1994-batch IPS officer Anurag Kumar as the new Commissioner of Delhi Police was out. The development marked the end of Golchha’s tenure, but unlike previous changes of guard at the city’s police headquarters, this one came with no advance notice. Golchha returned to the Delhi Police Headquarters on Jai Singh Road soon after the order was issued. According to sources, he went back to his office on the 17th floor, where he wrapped up the official work and awaited the next course of events.

Satish Golchha, FILE

What followed was an unusually hurried succession. Officers posted at the headquarters said that, ordinarily, they are informed in advance about the incoming Commissioner’s arrival. A schedule is circulated, ceremonial arrangements are made, the Delhi Police band leaves the New Police Lines in North Delhi in time, and a Guard of Honour is lined up. The media, too, is informed of the timing of the assumption of charge. On Friday, none of this happened. Officers at the headquarters said they had no information that the new Police Commissioner would be arriving almost immediately after the appointment order was circulated. The entire Police Headquarters, they said, was caught off guard. Around noon, Anurag Kumar arrived.

With no prior intimation, the ceremonial police band had not arrived from the New Police Lines. As a result, there was no Guard of Honour when Kumar entered the headquarters. Instead, senior officers hurried downstairs as word spread through the building that the new Commissioner had reached. Officers assembled quickly to receive him before he proceeded directly to the 17th floor. There, inside the Commissioner’s office, Kumar met the outgoing chief, Satish Golchha. In a brief ceremony, Golchha formally handed over the ceremonial baton to Kumar, symbolising the transfer of command of the Delhi Police. Only after the formal assumption of charge inside the office were the ceremonial proceedings completed. Kumar was then accorded the traditional Guard of Honour. The two officers exchanged a few words before Kumar escorted Golchha to the ground floor of the headquarters. Outside, it was then Golchha’s turn. The outgoing Commissioner was accorded his farewell Guard of Honour. Standing before the assembled contingent, Golchha returned the salute, shook hands with senior officers, and walked out of the headquarters.

2020 Delhi riots: HC seeks police stand on Sharjeel Imam’s fresh bail plea

Sohini Ghosh
New Delhi, July 17

THE DELHI High Court Friday sought the Delhi Police stand on student activist Sharjeel Imam’s fresh bail plea in the ‘larger conspiracy’ case linked to the 2020 Northeast Delhi riots. On July 4, a trial court had rejected Sharjeel’s second bail application in the case, underlining that it had “no option but to follow” the Supreme Court order dated January 5. The SC in its order had refused bail to activist Umar Khalid and Sharjeel, while granting bail to five other co-accused in the case. It had held that all accused could not be treated equally in view of the “hierarchy of participation”. In this hierarchy, Umar and Sharjeel were classified to be on a “higher footing” compared to the five others who were granted bail. The SC’s January order had also observed that only on the completion of the examination of protected witnesses or upon expiry of one year from the date of said order, whichever is earlier, Sharjeel and Umar would be at liberty to renew their prayer for grant of bail. Charges have not yet been framed by the trial court. According to the prosecution, the trial court has heard arguments on framing of charge from the accused for “more than 200 days”. On Friday, Sharjeel, through his counsel, told the HC bench of Justices Prathiba Singh and Vikas Mahajan that there have been subsequent developments since SC’s order. His counsel pointed to a Supreme Court judgment delivered in May, in which the court expressed “serious reservations” about various aspects of the January ruling that had denied him bail. The bench of Justices B V Nagarathna and Ujjal Bhuyan had made these observations while granting bail to a resident of Jammu and Kashmir, Syed Ifthikar Andrabi, in custody since 2020. Andrabi faces charges under the UAPA in a narco-terror case probed by the NIA.

INSPIRED BY TWIN TOWERS IN MALAYSIA & SINGAPORE, THE COMPLEX IS SET TO HAVE 30-35 FLOORS

Coming at ITO, a new Delhi Govt hub

Gayathri Mani
New Delhi, July 17

THE DELHI government's year-long search for a location to build the new Secretariat complex seems to have finally concluded with officials saying that the ITO area has been shortlisted. Inspired by the iconic twin towers in Malaysia and Singapore, the new complex is set to have 30-35 floors, said officials, adding that it will be a green building with rain-water harvesting and solar power systems.

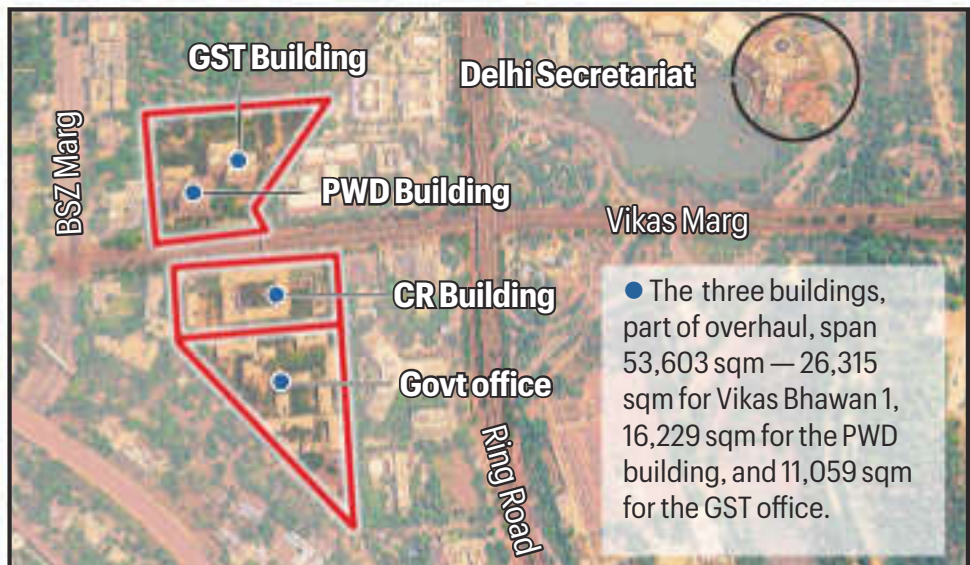

The Delhi Secretariat is the official headquarters of the Government of National Capital Territory of Delhi. At present, the complex is located in the IP Estate in ITO, and is also called the 'Players Building' — it was constructed to accommodate players during the 1982 Asian Games. The building was found to be "seismic unsafe" in 2023 in a study conducted by the Public Works Department (PWD).

Last August, after a visit to the office of Department of Women and Child Development at Kashmere Gate, Chief Minister Rekha Gupta had announced, "Time has come for Delhi to have a new, organised, and integrated secretariat for all departments. We will take steps in this direction starting today. A suitable location will be identified where the new Delhi Secretariat can be established, enabling all departments to function under one roof. We cannot leave our officials to work in such miserable conditions any longer."

On Friday, PWD Minister Parvesh Sahib Singh said that the department has started preliminary work on the project and soon a global tender will be floated to appoint an architect to design the project and company for preparing a detailed project report (DPR).

• A bird's eye view

Singh said tenders will be floated in a month's time and once the process is completed, the proposal will be moved for approval from the Finance department's Expenditure Finance Committee (EFC) and the Cabinet.

The project will involve demolishing the PWD headquarters, the GST building and Vikas Bhawan on the opposite side of Vikas Marg to house all government departments, along with the offices of the Chief Minister, ministers, bureaucrats and other employees.

The Minister said, "We looked at several locations and vacant plots available with the government but it has been decided to go with the ITO location only as it is centrally located and accessible to everyone. The buildings like Vikas Bhawan are very old and require redevelopment. If the twin tower is constructed, all the departments and staff will function from one place... Since it is a big project, a global tender will be floated inviting bids from across the world."

Earlier, the government had shortlisted about four locations during its search for a suitable location to build a new secretariat—Rajghat Power Plant, Khyber Pass, ITO MSO building, and Indraprastha Estate.

Double corridor

Under the proposed plan, PWD, the executing agency, is planning to construct a twin tower at ITO at Vikas Marg and connect the office complex at Vikas Bhawan on the other side via a long corridor, said officials.

The PWD headquarters had earlier housed Delhi Police departments too. Now, only some units of Delhi Police are functioning from the site.

Vikas Bhawan has offices of multiple departments, including the Excise department, Public Accounts Office and the Public Grievance Redressal Office, said officials.

This project, however, is not new. It was proposed during the AAP government back in 2021 when former deputy CM Manish Sisodia held the portfolio of PWD. Tenders were also floated to appoint consultants, which prepared architectural samples but the project remained on paper.

Officials said that the new complex will have improved facilities for parking, seminar and conference rooms, and several auditoriums.

Rape-murder of IRS officer's daughter: Security guard among first 4 to spot accused, probe reveals

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

Accused Rahul Meena seen in a CCTV footage .FILE

THE INVESTIGATION into the rape and murder of an Indian Revenue Service (IRS) officer's daughter in Southeast Delhi has revealed that a security guard, a driver and two residents were among the first people to see the 23-year-old accused, the IRS officer's former domestic help, entering and leaving his house on the day of the incident, The Indian Express has learnt.

On Friday, Delhi Police filed a 973-page chargesheet, which has statements from over 80 witnesses, along with forensic evidence, including DNA analysis, in a city court.

The incident was reported on the morning of April 22 when the IRS officer's daughter—described by investigators as a bright student preparing for the Union Public Service Commission (UPSC) examinations — was raped and killed inside her home. The accused also allegedly robbed the house.

Rahul Kumar Meena, the accused, was arrested within hours as police claimed that he had entered the house, knowing the victim would be alone while her parents were at the gym in the morning.

Sources said the investigation found that four people—a security guard of the society where the house is located, a driver and two residents — had seen the accused entering and later leaving the house. Two of them had questioned him about his presence there at that time. Police also recovered CCTV footage showing him entering and exiting the premises.

"In the wake of the seriousness of the offence, several teams were immediately constituted under the direct supervision of senior officers of the South-East District," a police officer said. Investigators analysed footage from more than 100 CCTV cameras to trace the accused's movements before and after the crime. He was arrested the same day. Police claimed that all the stolen property was recovered from his possession.

Experts from the Central Forensic Science Laboratory (CFSL), Lodhi Colony, and the Forensic Science Laboratory (FSL), Rohini, assisted in the investigation. Investigators said fingerprints and palm impressions lifted from the crime scene matched that of the accused, while DNA profiling linked him to biological evidence recovered during the investigation.

Police also conducted a crime scene reconstruction in the presence of CFSL experts. Sequential photographs and videography of the reconstruction, along with CCTV footage, were analysed for gait-pattern analysis. Behavioural Analysis Interviews and Layered Voice Analysis (LVA) were also conducted. The investigation team — comprising Inspectors Lokender and Rizwan Khan, SI Manmohan, Head Constable Rajesh and Constable Lakhani — carried out extensive inquiries, interviewing neighbours, security personnel, domestic workers, labourers, drivers and others in the area.

GHAZIABAD RAPE-MURDER CASE

‘Because she is poor?’ CJI raps hospitals for refusing to admit girl

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

THE SUPREME Court on Friday pulled up two private hospitals for alleged negligence in ensuring timely medical care to a four-year-old girl, who was raped and murdered in Uttar Pradesh's Ghaziabad earlier this year.

The comments came from a three-judge bench led by Chief Justice of India (CJI) Surya Kant. The bench is monitoring the investigation after the victim's father, a daily wage earner, sought a court-monitored probe by a Special Investigation Team (SIT) or the CBI.

During the hearing on Friday, the Chief Justice of India said the hospitals must give the girl's family compensation on their own without waiting for court orders and cautioned that the court will be forced to impose a penalty if they don't do so. "If you do (it) voluntarily, it will look good," he said.

The counsel appearing for one of the hospitals said he had already asked the hospital authorities to pay reasonable compensation to the victim's family. The bench asked him to return with instructions from his client.

Advocate Rajeev Kumar Dubey, appearing for the other hospital, said his client is an Ayurveda practitioner and her clinic does not have emergency services. "I am a BAMS doctor..." Dubey said on behalf of his client. The CJI replied, "But you can't be absolved like this. You may be any doctor. You failed to perform your duty. You have no business to write 'doctor' if you don't perform your duty. A child victim of such a heinous crime is brought before you, and you are so merciless that you don't even provide primary (care)."

During the hearing on Friday, the Chief Justice of India said the hospitals must give the girl's family compensation on their own without waiting for court orders

Dubey replied, "We don't even have emergency services, ICU. Within two minutes, we have referred to the other (hospital)."

The Chief Justice said, "If you had some sensitivity, you would have said, alright I don't have facility, I will accompany the child, will take to so and so." "And they (the other hospital) acted, of course, (in) the most ruthless manner. We never expected... such kind of people are there. Look at the kind of injuries... And... these people... only because she is a poor child, cannot afford their fee?"

On April 24, the court directed the setting up of an SIT after the father accused local police of insensitivity.

He also alleged that although the child was rushed to these hospitals, they did not provide emergency medical care.

GROUND report

‘Can’t fill the form... help us’: Race against time for BLOs in East Delhi where digitisation average is among the worst

Devansh Mittal
New Delhi, July 17

WITH JUST 13.81% of forms digitised, East Delhi is among the worst performing districts in the Capital in terms of digitising the enumeration forms filled out by electors as the Election Commission holds the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise in the city. Digitisation average across districts in Delhi is pegged at around 21%, according to the data provided by the Chief Electoral Office (CEO).

From unnumbered houses, confusing addresses to an average elector's inability to fill the form — booth level officers or BLOs in the East Delhi district say that they are facing a race against time to make sure no eligible electors are left out.

The Election Commission of India earlier this week extended the deadline for the ongoing door-to-door visits to August 8, giving BLOs more time to distribute and collect enumeration forms in Delhi.

It's a humid July afternoon. As Vivek Kumar, an English teacher and BLO of Mangal Bazaar's Block F in East Delhi, enters the street where he is supposed to distribute enumeration forms, he seeks help from passersby to locate the addresses on his list.

As he enters one of the houses, he sifts through hundreds of enumeration forms in his backpack. He puts his register, in which he notes all necessary details, and other stuff on the floor.

Explaining the process to the

residents, he gives a suggestion, "Please get the forms photocopied so that you can make mistakes." Most enumeration forms he gets, he adds, are riddled with mistakes. To place the residents of the house, he scans the list — the woman in the house is on Page 18 of his list, while her son is on Page 31. Around 45 minutes have passed and they realise that the woman's husband is assigned to another BLO.

Eyes on the list, Vivek is explaining to another resident on a call on how to find his father's details on the Election Commission Information Network or ECINET app. Multitasking has become necessary during hectic routines. He packs his stuff and makes way to the next home.

Annie Gomes, the next elector on the list, is not at her house, and the neighbours are not sure if she lives here or not. "We get a lot of such cases where the owner of the house has moved, but their vote is still registered here," says Vivek.

Around 10 km away is the Chilla Village near the Yamuna. A foul stench pervades the entire colony as open drains remain clogged with garbage. BLO Vinay Kumar is also facing a slew of challenges. As he knocks on the door of the house of 55-year-old Brahm Chand to collect the form he had given a couple days back, the resident gives a confused look. "Humse nahi bhara jaave form, tu bharde humara. (We are not able to fill this... you please fill on our behalf)."

A tired Vinay sits inside the house and ends up spending more than 30 minutes as he fills the forms of the family of five. The 31-year-old explains that most people in the village don't have fixed addresses. "While villagers might know each other, so many people are tenants. Sometimes, 15 families are renting out different rooms in one house... it gets very confusing," Vinay says, adding he has to fill out the forms of most people since they don't know how to read or write. Next, he goes and sits at the verandah of the house — a lot of people come to clear doubts. "If I can't place myself on electoral rolls, will I be sent to Bangladesh?" asks 60-year-old Anisha Khatun, who has a voter ID, but is not able to find herself or any relative in the 2002 electoral list. A neighbour tells her not to worry. She can show her widower's pension slip when she is sent a notice, she is told.

An election official explains, "In areas like Chilla Village and Kotla Village, a lot of the electors are labourers who are uneducated and don't understand the process. Also, many of them don't have any proof of where their parents lived since they even moved around and lived on rent."

Mahender Singh Manral
New Delhi, July 17

THE 21-YEAR-OLD son of Kuber Group director Vikas Malu was arrested by the Customs Department at Delhi's Indira Gandhi International Airport earlier this month in connection with the alleged attempt to smuggle three luxury wristwatches valued at around Rs 8.7 crore.

Vineet Malu, a co-managing director of the Kuber Group, was arrested on July 7 and granted bail by a Delhi court on the same day.

He was also ordered to furnish a personal bond of Rs 2 lakh with two local sureties of the same amount.

Duty Judicial Magistrate First Class (Patiala House Courts) Charan Salwan noted that the watches had already been recovered and observed that Vineet was wearing one watch, while the other two were in his bag. "In my considered opinion, he was not concealing any of the watches," the order said.

"Upon a careful consider-

The 21-year-old was arrested at Delhi's Indira Gandhi International Airport on July 7 after Customs recovered three luxury watches allegedly worth Rs 8.7 crore ation of the application for remand, it appears that the grounds put forth for seeking custody are stated in a routine and mechanical manner. The application does not disclose any specific facts or compelling circumstances demonstrating the necessity for custodial interrogation," it said. "The accused is a young boy of 21 years of age. It is stated by the IO that the accused has no previous involvement," it added.

The court directed him to cooperate with the Customs Department's investigation, not tamper with evidence or influence witnesses, and not leave India without prior permission.

He was also directed to surrender his passport within two days if it had not already been seized by Customs.

Rolex, Patek Philippe watches

According to the magistrate's order, Customs officers diverted Vineet for baggage screening based on spot profiling and suspicion as he crossed the green channel and approached the airport exit. Officers allegedly first noticed a Rolex wristwatch on his wrist, following which his baggage was scanned.

The order states that the X-ray scan revealed two more luxury wristwatches in his trolley bag.

When asked whether he was carrying any dutiable, prohibited or contraband goods, including gold items, Malu allegedly replied in the negative. He was then taken to Terminal 3 for a detailed examination, during which Customs recovered three watches — a rose-gold Rolex, a gold-coloured Patek Philippe, and a silver/platinum Patek Philippe with a blue dial. A chartered engineer assessed their combined value at around Rs 8.7 crore.

The Customs Department moved an application seeking 14 days' judicial custody, arguing that Vineet's custody was required to ascertain the root of the matter and unearth the alleged conspiracy.

The department also submitted that there was a likelihood that the accused could derail the investigation or influence witnesses.

Opposing the remand plea, Vineet's lawyers argued that he is a citizen of Vanuatu, ordinarily resides in Dubai, and had come to India to attend a wedding in Kolkata between July 6 and July 8.

They submitted that the watches were for his personal use and were to be taken back to Dubai.

The defence also told the court that he was willing to pay the leviable Customs duty and offered to deposit an FDR of Rs 3.04 crore as security.

Drainage overhaul on road linking Delhi and Gurgaon on the cards amid waterlogging woes

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

EYEING A hassle-free movement for commuters travelling between Delhi and Gurgaon via the waterlogging-prone Dera Mandi Road in South Delhi, the Public Works Department (PWD) in the Capital has decided to repair and redevelop the drainage line on the stretch in Chhatarpur.

The move assumes significance as Dera Mandi Road is a key route connecting South West Delhi's Chhatarpur area, known for its upscale farmhouses, with Gurgaon.

"Mandi Gaon and Dera Gaon lie along the Delhi-Haryana border. Years ago, before large-scale urban development and before Gurgaon expanded the way it has today, rainwater used to flow naturally through existing drainage channels. Today, with extensive concrete construction, rapid urbanisation and a significant increase in population, those natural pathways have disappeared. As a result, rainwater and even sewer water accumulate here

• THE PROJECT

- Redevelopment of drainage line in Chhatarpur
- Dera Mandi Road connects Chhatarpur with Gurgaon
- Construction of precast drain from Dera Mandi Road to Dera Bhati Road, connecting Bandh Road
- At Bandh Road, the accumulated water will be pumped into the SSN Marg drain
- The project will offer drainage solution, improve stormwater management on Dera Mandi Road during heavy rainfall," said PWD minister Parvesh Sahib Singh on Friday after a review of the stretch against the backdrop of complaints over heavy accumulation of rainwater. He inspected the condition of the road, drainage network, and sewer system, said an official.

He added, "Our objective is not merely to remove water after every spell of rain but to create infrastructure that prevents waterlogging in the first place. Every vulnerable location is being assessed, and long-term solutions are being implemented on priority."

Officials of the Delhi government also held a meeting with their counterparts in Haryana to redevelop the part of the drainage stretch in the neighbouring state and ensure complete relief from waterlogging, an official said.

The affected stretch falls under the jurisdiction of the Municipal Corporation of Delhi (MCD).

The PWD has decided that it will construct a new precast RCC (Reinforced Cement Concrete) drain from Dera Mandi Road to Dera Bhati Road, further connecting to Bandh Road, from where the water will be pumped into the SSN Marg drain within Delhi, an official said. The project is designed to provide a permanent drainage solution and significantly improve stormwater management in the area, an official said.

The official added, "Keeping public convenience as the top priority, the Delhi government is working in close coordination with the concerned agencies to ensure both immediate relief and a long-term solution. As an immediate measure, PTO (Power Take-Off) pumps have been deployed and are operating continuously to drain out the accumulated water from the affected stretch."

Singh also directed officials to prepare the project proposal on priority and ensure seamless coordination among all concerned agencies, so that work can commence at the earliest.

The Minister reiterated that ensuring safe and hassle-free movement for commuters during the monsoon remains one of the Delhi government's key priorities.

Residents who interacted with the Minister welcomed the proposed intervention and expressed confidence that the new drainage project would provide lasting relief from a long-standing waterlogging problem in the area, an official said.

BJP front wins 15/16 seats on SUMUL Dairy board, wipes out Cong panel

Express News Service
Surat, July 17

THE BJP-BACKED Sahkar panel won 15 of the 16 seats on the board of the Surat-Tapi District Co-operative Milk Producers' Union, popularly called SUMUL Dairy.

With one seat going to an independent, the Congress-backed Pashupalak Heet Rakshak Samiti, which held three seats in the earlier body, has been wiped out.

Elections to the board of directors of the dairy, which is part of the Gujarat Co-operative Milk Marketing Federation, owner of the Amul brand, was held on July 15.

SUMUL Dairy comprises 19 directors (members) including three nominated members, each representing the Gujarat Cooperative Milk Marketing Federation (GCMMF), the National Dairy Development Board, and the Surat district Registrar. Its annual turnover is around Rs 6,500 crore.

EYE ON SECURING MAJORITY FOR WOMEN QUOTA LAW AND DELIMITATION BILL

Govt puts draft law seeking removal of 'tainted' ministers on backburner

House panel defers adoption of report on 130th Constitution Amendment Bill

Liz Mathew
New Delhi, July 17

FOCUSED ON gathering the required majority for clearing the Constitution (31st Amendment Bill) for implementing the Women's Reservation law and the Delimitation Bill, the BJP-led Union government is not likely to bring the 130th Constitution Amendment Bill that seeks to remove ministers arrested for serious offences for 30 consecutive days, sources said.

Sources said the BJP has made the rollout of the Women's Reservation law and the Delimitation Bill its "priority" and does not want "other contentious Bills" to be pushed in the Monsoon Session beginning Monday.

"Securing a two-thirds majority for the women's quota law and the Delimitation Bill is the top priority as of now," said a senior BJP MP.

According to the sources, Opposition parties such as the DMK and the NCP(SP), with which the BJP has been in discussion for a favourable stand on the Delimitation Bill, have conveyed to the government that they cannot support the contentious Bill.

On Friday, the Joint Committee of Parliament examining the 130th Constitution Amendment Bill was expected to adopt the report but deferred it, The Indian Express has learnt.

even the TDP had reservations on some clauses in the Bill.

In the committee meeting, its chairperson, BJP's Aparajita Sarangi, is learnt to have agreed to wider consultations on the contentious clauses.

"The committee wants to get the Opposition also on board for adopting the report

The panel, led by BJP's Aparajita Sarangi, is learnt to have agreed to have wider consultations on contentious clauses unanimously. So, the chairperson was keen to give more time," said a source in the BJP.

It is learnt that the Opposition MPs in the House panel — AIMIM's Asaduddin Owaisi and NCP(SP)'s Supriya Sule — and YSRCP's Niranjan Reddy were prepared to give a dissenting note to the report but dropped it as the committee was ready for a wider consultation.

Most members of the panel from the Opposition, including the Congress, boycotted the proceedings, arguing that their participation was pointless as the ruling party would override their concerns and use the panel as a rubber stamp to clear the Bill.

The Constitution (130th Amendment) Bill, 2025, provides for the removal of a minister if he/she is accused of an offence punishable with five or more years of imprisonment and has been arrested and detained for 30 consecutive days. The removal, according to the proposed Bill, can be directed by the President or Governor upon the advice of the Prime Minister or the Chief Minister, or automatically on the 31st day of detention.

Removal or suspension

It is learnt that during Friday's meeting, many members raised their apprehension over replacing the word "removal" with "suspension" — a suggestion that came during the consultation with the different parties and premier law universities — as it may dilute the purpose of the Bill.

Although allies like the TDP have backed the Bill, saying the proposed legislation could strengthen the institutional mechanism for combating corruption involving people holding high offices and bring in accountability, it also wants provisions preventing misuse of the law to be incorporated, sources said.

The final report is expected to incorporate the suggestions from the panel members for avoiding any misuse of the law. The committee is also expected to recommend curbs or a threshold regarding the nature of the crime for the provisions of the proposed law to apply.

But the ruling party members in the panel are learnt to have rejected the Opposition's argument that the provisions in the proposed law are undemocratic, anti-federal and contradict the bedrock principle of natural justice by punishing public representatives purely based on custody rather than conviction.

New Delhi, July 17

PRESIDENT DROUPADI Murmu will embark on a week-long state visit to Moldova, Romania and North Macedonia, starting July 19, to strengthen ties with the Eastern and central European countries.

“President Droupadi Murmu will visit Moldova on July 20 at the invitation of the President Maia Sandu. This is the first ever visit by an Indian President to Moldova,” said the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) on Friday.

During the first leg of her three-nation visit, President Murmu will hold delegation level talks with her counterpart, and meet President of the Moldovan Parliament, Igor Grosu. She will also interact with members of the Moldova-India Parliamentary Friendship Group as well as the Indian diaspora there, and address a business forum.

"There is good scope for mutually beneficial cooperation in the areas of agriculture, healthcare and pharmaceuticals, IT and education," added the MEA statement.

In the second part of the trip, Murmu will land in North Macedonia for two days from July 21. This also marks the first ever visit by an Indian President to the nation. Murmu will hold bilateral talks with President Gordana Siljanovska-Davkova, meet Prime Minister Hristijan Mickoski, and address the Assembly of North Macedonia. Both sides are keen on deepening economic ties in sectors like agriculture, pharmaceuticals, science and technology, IT and ITES.

The final leg of the tour will see President Murmu land in Romania — which will see a visit by an Indian President after three decades — on July 23. She will meet her counterpart Nicușor Dan and interim PM Ilie Bolojan. President Murmu will also address India-Romania Business Forum and will interact with the Indian diaspora there.

Engineering Education for a New India: Preparing Future Engineers for an Era of Innovation

India stands at a defining moment in its technological journey. With rapid advances in Artificial Intelligence, semiconductors, robotics, digital manufacturing, clean energy, and quantum technologies, the role of engineering education is being fundamentally redefined. Engineering colleges today have a responsibility that extends far beyond awarding degrees—they must nurture innovators, entrepreneurs, researchers, and responsible citizens who can contribute to the nation's technological and economic progress.

The first quality that every engineering student must cultivate is a strong foundation in science, mathematics, and engineering principles. However, technical knowledge alone is no longer sufficient. Successful engineers are distinguished by their ability to think critically, solve real-world problems, adapt to emerging technologies, and continuously learn throughout their careers. Curiosity, creativity, resilience, communication skills, teamwork, leadership, and professional ethics are equally important. In today's rapidly evolving technological landscape, lifelong learning has become an essential professional competency.

Equally important is the adoption of interdisciplinary engineering education. The most significant innovations of our time lie at the intersection of multiple disciplines. An electric vehicle integrates mechanical engineering, electronics, battery technology, artificial intelligence, embedded systems, and data analytics. Similarly, smart healthcare devices combine biomedical engineering with electronics, AI, cloud computing, and communication technologies. Semiconductor chip design requires expertise in electronics, computer science, materials science, physics, and advanced manufacturing. Engineering graduates must therefore be trained to collaborate across disciplines and develop solutions to complex societal and industrial challenges.

Industry-academia collaboration has emerged as another cornerstone of quality engineering education. Industry-supported laboratories within engineering institutions play a crucial role in bridging the gap between theoretical concepts and practical applications. These laboratories expose students to industry-grade tools, design software, testing equipment, and manufacturing processes used in professional environments. They facilitate internships, live projects, faculty development, collaborative research, and industry certifications. Such partnerships enhance students' technical competence and significantly improve their employability and innovation capabilities. Industry laboratories have become centres where education, research, product development, and entrepreneurship converge.

The Government of India's visionary initiatives have further accelerated this transformation. Among these, the India Semiconductor Mission represents one of the most strategic investments in the country's technological future. Semiconductors form the foundation of modern technologies, including smartphones, electric vehicles, defence systems, medical equipment, communication networks, industrial automation, and Artificial Intelligence. Through investments in fabrication facilities, chip packaging, testing, design infrastructure, and talent development, the mission aims to establish India as a global semiconductor hub. Its impact extends beyond technological self-reliance to employment generation, economic growth, supply chain resilience, and national security. For engineering institutions, this creates opportunities to develop specialised programmes, establish semiconductor design laboratories, and prepare skilled professionals for this emerging ecosystem.

Recognising these changing industry expectations, engineering colleges across the country are redesigning their curricula. Traditional programmes are being enriched with courses in Artificial Intelligence, Machine Learning, Data Science, Internet of Things, Cybersecurity, Robotics, Semiconductor Design, Cloud Computing, and Digital Manufacturing. Greater emphasis is being placed on project-based learning, multidisciplinary education, internships, innovation, startup incubation, research, and experiential learning in alignment with the National Education Policy 2020. Students are increasingly encouraged to participate in hackathons, innovation challenges, patent development, research publications, and entrepreneurial ventures, enabling them to translate ideas into practical solutions.

From an employer's perspective, campus recruitment has also undergone a significant transformation. Companies are no longer evaluating candidates solely on academic scores. They seek graduates who possess strong conceptual understanding, programming proficiency, analytical thinking, problem-solving ability, communication skills, adaptability, teamwork, and a willingness to learn. Practical exposure through internships, industry projects, certifications, research, and innovation activities often differentiates outstanding candidates. Employers increasingly value individuals who can adapt to changing technologies, collaborate effectively in multidisciplinary teams, and contribute productively from the beginning of their careers.

As India aspires to become a developed nation under the vision of Viksit Bharat 2047, engineering education will play an indispensable role in shaping the country's technological future. Institutions must continue to strengthen partnerships with industry, invest in modern laboratories, encourage interdisciplinary learning, and foster a culture of research, innovation, and entrepreneurship. Our objective should not merely be to produce employable graduates but to develop engineers who create technologies, generate employment, solve national challenges, and contribute to global scientific advancement.

The future belongs to engineers who combine technical excellence with creativity, ethical responsibility, and an unwavering commitment to lifelong learning. By nurturing such professionals, engineering institutions will not only meet the evolving needs of industry but also help position India as a global leader in technology, innovation, and sustainable development.

Opp's Dilemma

EVER SINCE the 18th Lok Sabha was formed, the Congress has been calling a meeting of INDIA bloc leaders ahead of every Parliament session to discuss the Opposition's stance and strategies. However, the recent developments following the Assembly elections in West Bengal, Tamil Nadu and Kerala have put a question mark on the relationship among the parties. Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge has convened a meeting in his chamber at 10 am on Monday (July 20). According to sources, some Opposition party leaders are insisting it should not be called INDIA bloc meeting but just an "Opposition meeting". One Opposition leader pointed out that last time the invitation had come as "a meeting of leaders of Opposition parties". This time, Congress leaders admitted that they had no idea who would turn up for the meeting on Monday morning.

Back in Action

AHEAD OF the start of the Monsoon Session of Parliament on Monday, the Lok Sabha Secretariat changed the agency responsible for issuing passes to former MPs, officials, visitors and media personnel. The Central Industrial Security Force (CISF) has been replaced by the Parliament Security Service (PSS) starting Friday. This comes two years after the CISF took over security and pass-issuing responsibility from the PSS following a security breach inside the Lower House. It is learnt that the decision to go back to PSS for passes was taken on Thursday. This comes after several former MPs complained that the CISF personnel did not recognise them and took longer to issue passes, sources said. The security of the Parliament premises will stay with the CISF, it is learnt.

BJP bats for NCP merger to boost numbers ahead of delimitation push

Sunetra camp wants finance portfolio as well as NCP national president post; party old guard for inclusive power-sharing

Liz Mathew
New Delhi, July 17

WITH BJP stepping up its efforts to muster up the numbers in Parliament for the passage of the legislative package on delimitation and the rollout of the Women's Reservation Act, the party has informed the NCP and the Sharad Pawar-led NCP (SP) that only a unified NCP part of the NDA is acceptable to it and that it is not in favour of either group merging with it.

Highly placed sources said BJP leadership had offered two Union Cabinet berths to balance the power equations between the Sunetra Pawar-led NCP and NCP (SP) if both agree to merge. Sources said the BJP's top leadership was keen on retaining the NCP as a separate entity in the NDA as it is cautious about not weakening its allies.

"The leadership has objected to the idea of our allies merging with BJP. Politically, the NCP remaining as a party will help us consolidate the non-Brahmin and Maratha votes in Maharashtra," said a BJP insider.

The BJP leadership's stance comes against the backdrop of growing uneasiness among sections in the party about what is seen as the "sidelining" of long-time workers.

Potential hurdles

Preliminary discussions about the merger have taken place, sources said, explaining that everything now hinges on the ongoing struggle between Deputy CM Sunetra Pawar and the NCP old guard. These differences have existed since Ajit Pawar died in an aircraft crash in January. The day after his death, The Indian Express reported that the two NCPs were set to make the reunification announcement on February 8. The talks were at an advanced stage and leaders from the two sides were preparing the ground for a formal reunification following the Zilla Parishad results. However, the plans got scuppered because of Ajit Pawar's death.

minister, but the department went to CM Devendra Fadnavis after the NCP leader's death — and the NCP national president post in the event of a merger. However, senior leaders such as NCP state president Sunil Tatkare, working president Praful Patel, and MLA Chhagan Bhujbal want power-sharing to be more inclusive. Sunetra Pawar has also questioned Tatkare about not being informed about his and Patel's midnight meeting at Fadnavis's home on July 14, but the senior NCP leader has dismissed speculation about a rift with the Deputy CM.

"There will be issues if they (Sunetra camp) insist on having a Cabinet portfolio, the state finance ministry, and the national president post, as the other side (NCP-SP) is unlikely to agree," said a source.

How numbers stack up

The NCP's entry into the NDA will bring the Narendra Modi government closer to a two-thirds majority in Parliament, a requirement for passage of Constitution amendment Bills. The government's attempts had been defeated in a special session of the Lok Sabha in April.

Since then, at least 37 LS and RS MPs from four Opposition parties have switched to the ruling side. With three vacancies, the current LS strength is 540, including two jailed MPs. This brings the two-thirds mark to 360. In April, NDA had 293 MPs in LS and after the splits in TMC and Shiv Sena (UBT), its tally is now 319. If NCP (SP) backs the Bill, NDA tally will go up to 327, 33 short of the two-thirds mark, with BJP hoping to bridge the gap with support from more parties and abstentions by some.

'Some are trying to end Parth Pawar's political career': Internal NCP letter

Alok Deshpande
Mumbai, July 17

THE NCP's internal divisions spilled into the open on Friday after a senior office-bearer wrote to Deputy CM Sunetra Pawar, accusing leaders within the party of trying to "systematically" end Rajya Sabha MP Parth Pawar's political career and urging that he be considered for a berth in the next Union Cabinet expansion.

The letter by NCP vice president Udaykumar Aher on July 13 became public hours after Parth met CM Devendra Fadnavis, the latest in a series of interactions between NCP leaders and the CM amid growing signs of chum within the ruling party.

In the letter, Aher alleged that Parth had been deliberately sidelined after the 2019 Lok Sabha election. "Certain people are systematically trying to ensure the end of Parth Dada's political career and this is an open secret. Therefore, we should give Parth Dada an opportunity in the Union Cabinet to prove his capability, providing a befitting reply to those making allegations and spreading misconceptions," the letter states.

Aher claimed that late Ajit Pawar had wanted Parth to be given a larger political role. "After 2019 LS elections, work was deliberately done to belittle Parth Dada and lower his morale... Ajit Dada was convinced that Parth should be given a major opportunity. We should now fulfil the dream," it says.

Earlier this week, separate meetings between state president Sunil Tatkare, national working president Praful Patel and Fadnavis fuelled speculation of rift within the party. Sunetra is learnt to have expressed displeasure at not being informed about those meetings.

House session ahead, DMK signals Delhi reset: Bill by Bill, bloc by bloc, TN first

Arun Janardhanan
Chennai, July 17

WHEN MK Stalin addressed the DMK's MPs through a video conference from London on July 16, the resolutions formally adopted spoke of Cauvery water, the Mekedatu dam, state autonomy, and constitutional values. Yet, the most consequential message was contained not in the resolutions. It was in what the party carefully chose not to commit itself to. DMK is no longer promising automatic opposition and, instead, is assuring careful examination.

For a party that only three months ago burnt copies of the proposed Delimitation Bill in protest, and stood shoulder to shoulder with the INDIA bloc, the new language marks a striking shift.

"We will study the final text of the Bill before taking a decision," DMK organising secretary R S Bharathi said, adding that if the Centre incorporates the party's recommendations, "there is no need for DMK to oppose it". DMK insists it has not softened its commitment to federalism or Tamil Nadu's rights. Party leaders argue that if New Delhi changes its position, it is only logical for DMK to respond accordingly. Yet, politically, the message is unmistakable.

Neither BJP nor Congress will receive DMK's blind loyalty and the yardstick, Stalin told his MPs, would be "state autonomy" and the Constitution.

DMK has lost the Assembly election. Almost every major party that once formed the backbone of its coalition — the Congress, the Left, the VCK, and the IUML — has crossed over to support the TVK government. The party has skipped an INDIA bloc meet, sought a new seating arrangement in Parliament away from Congress, and now finds itself occupying an unusual political space: outside government in Chennai, outside the Opposition bloc in Delhi, and possessing one of the largest regional contingents in the Lok Sabha.

With 22 MPs, M K Stalin-led DMK remains a significant force in Parliament. @MKSTALIN

With 22 MPs, DMK remains a significant force in Parliament. That makes it valuable to both sides. Should the BJP-led government seek to reintroduce contentious legislation — whether on delimitation, simultaneous elections or other constitutional questions — the DMK's support or abstention could substantially influence the arithmetic in the House.

The party, however, appears determined to maximise that leverage rather than spend it in advance. Thursday's resolutions reflected that approach. The MPs resolved to forcefully raise Tamil Nadu's concerns on the Cauvery dispute, demand a tribunal on the Mekedatu project, and continue championing federalism and state rights.

Stalin later wrote that every DMK MP would function as the "voice and conscience" of TN. That formulation perhaps best captures the party's emerging doctrine.

The political pressures con-

E. EXPLAINED

A fundamental shift

After decades of aligning with one political camp or another, DMK is signalling that neither BJP nor Congress will enjoy its automatic support. Instead, every Bill — from delimitation to federalism — will be judged solely on whether it serves TN's interests. This reflects not merely a tactical recalibration but a recognition that the political ground beneath the DMK has fundamentally changed.

fronting DMK are unlike any it has experienced in recent decades. At home, it is preparing for what could become its most difficult electoral cycle. Local body elections are approaching. The 2029 LS election looms. The TVK, meanwhile, continues to consolidate its position, drawing former allies from DMK while simultaneously attracting influential leaders and legislators from the AIADMK.

For the first time in decades, DMK is being squeezed from multiple directions. The party is no longer trying to be BJP's fiercest opponent or Congress's most dependable ally. Instead, it is attempting something more difficult: becoming indispensable to both without belonging entirely to either. For now, the message from London is unmistakable. The DMK wants New Delhi to understand that its support is no longer assumed. It has to be earned, Bill by Bill, vote by vote, and always through the prism of Tamil Nadu.

Lok Sabha Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi interacts with students during 'Chhatron Ki Goonj' programme in Dehradun on Friday. PTI

'My dreams came crashing down': Job aspirants interact with Rahul

Aiswarya Raj
Dehradun, July 17

CONGRESS LEADER Rahul Gandhi on Friday said that the youth were now faced with more closed doors than open ones as he interacted with students and job aspirants in his Chhatron Ki Goonj (Voice of Students) outreach programme in Dehradun.

"Every year, crores of houses in India have young people like you leave behind their normal lives to prepare for exams," LoP told the crowd. "Only a few siblings get to work towards an exam in a household because parents cannot afford to let all children prepare. For the salaried class, Rs 9 lakh for five years is a lot, and if two, three, or four children are to go this way, they will not be able to provide the opportunity."

Addressing a constituency aggrieved by paper leak scandals and unemployment, he criticised the prevailing situation in the country, saying the manufacturing sector has been slow in generating jobs, entrepreneurship has been "captured by four-five businessmen", and corporate jobs are increasingly being weeded out by AI, leaving the youth to look for government jobs.

Uttarakhand has witnessed repeated protests over alleged paper leaks in its own recruitment examinations.

Last September, demonstrations erupted over allegations that the question paper for an exam conducted by the Uttarakhand Subordinate Services Selection Commission (UKSSSC) had been leaked. In 2023, another wave of protests followed allegations that question papers for the Uttarakhand PSC patwari and accountant recruitment exam had been sold to aspirants, forcing the cancellation of the exam. BJP government subsequently introduced legislation to curb cheating in recruitment exam.

On Friday, Gandhi said,

"There are 9 crore youths at the door for a government job, but they have several hurdles. They encounter prohibitive financial costs, family pressures, and the issue of the age limit, before six lakh candidates finally go through the door. This means one in every 150 candidates."

Bringing four government job aspirants to the dais, Gandhi spoke with them. Kalpana Joshi, an Uttarakhand services exam candidate, said she has been preparing for exams since 2020. "My first exam was in 2022, and when I got out of the exam centre, I came to know that the paper had been leaked. In 2022 and 2023, 13 exams were cancelled. It felt like the purpose with which I had set out to prepare, all my dreams came crashing down," Joshi said.

Arti Bhandari said she had appeared for the test by the UKSSSC for Patwari in 2025. "I appeared for the retest in June after it was cancelled. I am still preparing for other tests."

'Sycophants surround Tejashwi': RJD spokesperson puts in papers

Santosh Singh
Patna, July 17

RJD'S STATE spokesperson Mrityunjay Tiwari on Friday resigned from all party posts, alleging that its national working president and leader of opposition in the Assembly, Tejashwi Prasad Yadav, remains inaccessible to committed workers.

Tiwari said it was becoming increasingly difficult for spokespersons like him to defend the party, with Tejashwi often taking sabbaticals during important political events in the state.

He joined the RJD in 2009 and became a part of its sports wing. Since 2014, he had been the party's spokesperson. He was also seen as a prominent Brahmin face, helping anchor Tejashwi's broader political strategy to expand the party's traditional Muslim-Yadav base into an all-inclusive coalition.

"Lalu Prasad introduced me to party workers at a public function and made me party spokesperson. But once he passed the mantle of his party to his son Tejashwi Prasad Yadav, the drift started," Tiwari said. "Tejashwi ji is encircled by sycophants and does not have time for committed workers like us. I requested his time so he could connect more with genuine workers, but my advice fell on deaf ears. Everyone has been talking about Bankipur bypolls, but Tejashwi ji is nowhere to be seen," he said.

RJD national spokesperson Subodh Kumar Mehta, said, "Mrityunjay Tiwari ji has always upheld our party ideology. The party has to look into the concerns he raised. A set of leaders must not be allowed to prevail over the party."

● EX-MINISTER SONAM WANGYAL HAD RECALLED THAT DURING HIS SECOND FAST TO SEEK ST STATUS FOR LADAKH PEOPLE, INDIRA FLEW TO LEH TO ASSURE HIM ABOUT ACCEPTING THE DEMAND

How Sonam Wangchuk's father broke his 1984 fast after Indira met him

Vikas Pathak
New Delhi, July 17

While activist Sonam Wangchuk has been on an indefinite hunger strike at Jantar Mantar since June 28 as part of a protest organised by the Cockroach Janta Party (CJP) to demand the resignation of Union Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan over alleged NEET paper leak, he seems to be carrying forward his father Sonam Wangyal's legacy.

Wangyal had fasted for 16 days in 1982 and again for five days in 1984 to demand the Scheduled Tribe (ST) status for the people of Ladakh.

The 1984 hunger strike of Wangyal ended when then PM

Indira Gandhi flew to Leh to meet him. She persuaded him to end his fast, offering him a glass of soft drink. Gandhi also expressed her intent to accept his demand, but was assassinated later that year.

Subsequently, it was PM Rajiv Gandhi, who in 1989 ensured the ST status to a number of Ladakh communities.

Recounting the episode in his memoir titled Political Evolution in Post-Independence Ladakh, published by the International Association for Ladakh Studies, Wangyal wrote, "Ladakh had also long deserved tribal status. People living in the North-East states and along the Himalayas had been declared Scheduled Tribes, but

Then PM Indira Gandhi with Sonam Wangyal. @MANSOORKHANINC

Ladakh had been ignored."

Wangyal stated that in 1982, "a campaign was launched in this regard, and I took an active part in the movement". Both the Muslim and Buddhist communities of Ladakh were involved in this campaign, he maintained. "To help express the frustrations of the people against the indifference of the government towards this long-standing demand, I went on hunger strike for 16 days from the 15th to the 30th of January. In 1984, I again went on hunger strike for five days," Wangyal recalled. "Mrs Indira Gandhi, then the Prime Minister of India, visited Leh and assured us that Ladakh would be granted Scheduled Tribe status. She asked me to withdraw my hunger strike, and offered me a glass of soft drink."

On Indira's return to Delhi, Wangyal stated, "She announced the intention of the Government to grant ST status to the people of Ladakh, however, this decision wasn't implemented until 1989."

Wangyal, who belonged to an underprivileged family in Ladakh, met Shridhar Koul Dulu — who was raising a volunteer force to ward off the Pakistani invasion in October 1947 — and volunteered to join him. Dulu advised him to go to Delhi to raise resources for his schooling, and also wrote a letter to then PM Jawaharlal Nehru recommending it.

Wangyal wrote in his memoir that he proceeded to Manali on foot to go to Delhi, walking over snow for seven days. It took him 45 days to reach Delhi, where he sought an appointment with the PM. Nehru met him and offered him a scholarship to study. Wangyal was then admitted to SP High School in Srinagar. He finished his matriculation and became a private assistant to Kushok Bakula, the head Lama of Spituk Monastery in Leh.

Soon afterwards, Wangyal launched a campaign against corruption in the administration, and was arrested and jailed multiple times. He was said to be often beaten up by the police. He was later named the Leh district president of the National Conference (NC) and then, after the dissolution of the NC, became the Leh unit chief of the Congress.

In 1957, Wangyal was elected to the Legislative Council of J&K, and remained an MLC for a decade. In 1967, he became an MLA from Leh on a Congress ticket. He later also served as a minister in the J&K Cabinet.

Khara visits Wangchuk, slams 'insensitive' Govt

New Delhi: A day after Congress broke its silence on activist Sonam Wangchuk's hunger strike demanding Union Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan's resignation, party MP Pawan Khara visited Wangchuk on Friday and accused the "insensitive" central government of not understanding the language of democratic protest.

"... In the face of such a government, the method of protest should keep evolving. We are concerned about his health and also about the students sitting with him. By putting your lives at risk, you will not be able to achieve anything from this government," Khara said at Jantar Mantar in Delhi. ENS

Bengal: Search on for missing state-level teen shooter

Atri Mitra
Kolkata, July 17

STATE-LEVEL rifle shooter Damayanti Sen, 15, went missing on Thursday in West Bengal's Howrah district.

According to the family of the teenager, a resident of Central Howrah, she had gone to buy milk near her home on Thursday morning, but has been missing ever since. She was last seen at Howrah railway station.

A missing person complaint has been filed at the Howrah police station. According to the family, CCTV footage from Howrah railway station showed the teenager entering the station around 9.45 a.m. She was last seen moving towards platforms 4 and 5 around 10 a.m., when local trains to Arambagh and Bardhaman were scheduled to arrive at these platforms, the family said.

The family has also made an appeal on social media to find her. Since then, multiple calls have been received with knowledge of Damayanti's whereabouts, but none of the leads have turned out to be reliable so far. Later on Friday evening, the teenager's father met Sports Minister Indranil Khan.

SC: Name deletion under SIR does not mean automatic loss of citizenship

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

REITERATING THAT the Election Commission of India (ECI) is not the final authority to determine citizenship, the Supreme Court in oral remarks on Friday said that deletion from the electoral roll following the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) would not result in automatic loss of citizenship status. The status will continue for other purposes until final adjudication by the concerned authority.

A three-judge bench presided by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant pointed out that it had already made this clear in its judgment upholding the Bihar SIR.

The comments came as the bench, also comprising Justices Joymala Bagchi and V Mohana, was hearing a plea seeking its intervention to streamline the hearings before the tribunals set up to hear appeals against exclusions from the voters list.

Senior Advocate Gopal Sankaranarayanan, appearing for petitioner Prasenjit Bose, said that only about 38,000 appeals have been disposed of so far by the 19 Appellate Tribunals and that about 33.5 lakh are pending. Indian Express @ 4:00 a.m. <https://whatsapp.com/channel/0029Van2VRb6RGJOKH6oBd0F>

He said that of the 38,000 which were disposed of, 70 per cent were allowed, and their names were restored. "There is one more issue. It's about the consequences of the deletions being sustained... Now the 30 per cent which were not allowed, they will challenge in writs or whatever. But the consequence of a deletion is that between May 17 and now, three notifications have come, maybe others will come, saying if you have been deleted from the SIR list, you lose out on PDS which you were getting earlier, they are excluding you from Annapurna Yojana..." he said.

Justice Bagchi said the point was flagged before the bench a few days ago as well. "We are conscious of this. And we indicated that in our judgment in Bihar SIR. We made clear that there is a corresponding duty on the ECI, as soon as it takes a decision, that a citizenship is not in their estimation, correctly assessed and he (stands) deleted from the voters list but the status continues..." the ECI has a corresponding duty to refer it to the ministry or the concerned central government department for an adjudication under the citizenship Act. Unless that is done, for other purposes, the status must go on."

Sankaranarayanan said, "I think to be fair, I don't think either they disclosed or we apprehended at all that all these other welfare schemes which are available to people who reside here would also be withdrawn. I don't think that was apprehended by your lordships because then I presume your lordships could add one sentence saying, while it's being adjudicated, please don't take other civil rights which are available to citizens."

On this, Justice Bagchi said, "Our judgment is clear – ECI is not a constitutional authority with regard to status under Art 9, 10, 11 and 12." Sankaranarayanan said, "but the problem today is it is being used as that".

Justice Bagchi said, "There are two things, one - whether there is confusion in the law, two - whether the law is correctly implemented. In the first, we do not see any confusion. Our judgment is clear. ECI has control and superintendence over the electoral roll and the powers... and can decide not to include someone over doubts that he is not citizen of the country. That does not result in loss of status of citizenship per se."

Sankaranarayanan said, "What I'm saying is that of the 34 lakh appeals... if only 38,000 have been disposed of, there are 33.5 lakh that are still pending. Now, those 33.5 lakh have all these things being withdrawn from them, while their appeals are pending, where at least the track record shows 70% of the appeals have been allowed. So, in the interregnum, the consequence of the appeal not being heard..."

The senior counsel said, "You have taken away the vote. Municipal elections are in October. That deprivation will continue until the appeals are heard. So, we are only suggesting mechanism should try and ensure some transparency and accountability and to assist those 19 Tribunals..."

Pointing to the removal of those deleted from the Annapurna Yojana, the plea said, "The consequences of wrongful deletion extend beyond electoral participation and directly affect access to welfare benefits."

The court said it will hear it along with other West Bengal SIR matters.

400-year-old cannon stolen from historic Narwar Fort in Shivpuri

A 400-year-old cannon, weighing nearly 3.5 tonnes, was stolen from the historic Narwar Fort in Madhya Pradesh's Shivpuri district, in what investigators believe was a meticulously planned operation targeting one of the state's most valuable heritage artefacts. The cannon, displayed in the fort's Open Kacheri complex, is believed to have been removed during the night of July 15-16. Investigators believe the thieves first attempted to steal the cannon on July 5 and pushed the object from its original position, but failed to transport it because of its weight. The accused then returned on July 15, removed the cannon, and loaded it onto a vehicle waiting below, officers said. The stolen cannon was one of 14 historic cannons preserved at the fort. The Open Kacheri complex, where they were displayed, dates back to the 16th century. ENS

Jammu: Man's killing in police confrontation puts Doda on edge, mobile internet services snapped

Arun Sharma
Jammu, July 17

PROTESTS BROKE out in Jammu's Doda district on Friday following the death of a local man, allegedly during a confrontation with the police, prompting the district administration to suspend mobile internet services in the area. While locals claimed he was an innocent auto driver, police officials alleged he was stopped at a checkpoint to stop suspected cattle smuggling.

Identifying the deceased as Arif Hussain, 30, from Cheeka village in Bhaderwah sub-division, locals alleged that he was shot by a party of J&K Police's Special Operation Group (SOG) following an altercation, Thursday night. His acquaintance, who tried to intervene, was allegedly beaten up by the SOG personnel, locals claimed.

Police officials, who did not wish to be identified, said the SOG personnel had laid a naka (checkpoint) at Jai-Gandoh road, nearly 35 kilometres from Bhaderwah, following information about the movement of suspected bovine smugglers.

Around 11.30 pm, they claimed they intercepted two people who attacked the SOG personnel and tried to snatch an automatic weapon from one of the personnel. During the scuffle, the weapon went off, injuring Hussain, while the other person managed to escape, they claimed.

Three police personnel were injured in the attack, officials said, adding that they were rushed to the sub-district hospital at Bhaderwah and from there to the Government Medical College Hospital in Doda. The injured man was declared dead on arrival.

As news of the death reached Bhaderwah and adjoining areas, local residents came out on the streets in protest, claiming he was an innocent auto driver.

The Anjuman-e-Islamia, Bhaderwah, gave a call for a local resident into custody.

Sensing trouble, the administration on Friday morning suspended mobile internet services in Doda district. Senior civil and police officers were camping in Bhaderwah to monitor the situation.

The man's body was handed over to his family members after post-mortem.

Kodagu homestay 'rape': After HC fines state, owner seeks quashing of chargesheet

Express News Service
Bengaluru, July 17

THE OWNER of a homestay in the Kodagu region of Karnataka whose arrest on April 19 in connection with the alleged rape of a US national at his place was deemed illegal by the Karnataka High Court on July 15 has also moved the court to quash the chargesheet filed against him in the case.

In his petition, the owner, Palecanda Ponnappa alias Vishal, has cited technical evidence that he was not present at the homestay facility when the alleged incident occurred.

Ponnappa, his employee Vrijesh Kumar Ray and a taxi driver, Thejas Kumar, who brought the US citizen to the resort from Bengaluru on April 12, the day of the alleged incident, were named in the chargesheet filed by the Kodagu police on June 7.

While Ray and Kumar are accused of sexual assault, Ponnappa is facing charges of not informing authorities about the alleged incident.

On July 7, the High Court ordered a stay on the trial with respect to Ponnappa, while adding that it "will not come in the way of further trial or proceedings or investigation, whatever the case would be qua the other accused".

On July 15, the court further ruled that the arrest of Ponnappa was illegal since no cognizable offence was cited against him. "Arrest is not a ritualistic exercise to be undertaken at the whim of the investigating agency; it is a grave intrusion into personal liberty, sanctioned only upon strict compliance with statutory safeguards and constitutional limitations," the court said, while also ordering payment of Rs 5 lakh as compensation to Ponnappa by the state for the wrongful arrest.

In his plea seeking quashing of the chargesheet, Ponnappa has also cited a video statement given by the alleged victim on May 30, after she returned to the US, where she accused the taxi driver Thejas Kumar of assaulting her in the guise of providing a massage.

It was following this statement that the Kodagu police arrested Kumar on June 2, Ponnappa said in his plea, adding that the case began "as a single, self-contained allegation against the resident cook (and) thereafter underwent a striking transformation".

This was a reference to the initial complaint filed by the alleged victim, after leaving the resort and seeking assistance from the US consulate, where she accused the cook, Ray, of sexually assaulting her after "spiking" a welcome drink she was given when she arrived at the resort.

While ruling Ponnappa's arrest illegal, the High Court rejected his plea to also quash the FIR in the case, observing that the investigation must continue. Advocate Angad Kamath, appearing for Ponnappa, said that in their second petition, they are seeking quashing of the chargesheet against him. The matter is scheduled to be heard on July 30.

The second petition points out that while Ponnappa was initially booked for several serious offences, the graver charges had been dropped by police at the stage of filing of the chargesheet. He now faces only two allegations – intentional omission to give information of an offence, and failing to furnish particulars of a foreign guest.

According to Ponnappa's petition, neither of these offences is made out against him.

One of the principal grounds urged by Ponnappa is that he was not present at the homestay when the alleged offence took place, with the "survivor" also placing his arrival around 6 pm, long after the alleged incident. Since he was absent, he neither had knowledge of the alleged offence nor could he have intentionally omitted to report it, Ponnappa has argued.

Human error, says CM; police arrest gateman on duty

Sweetie Kumari
Kolkata, July 17

FOUR SCHOOL students and a senior citizen died after a passenger train rammied a school van crossing railway tracks in West Bengal's Murshidabad district early on Friday.

Four others, including the van's driver, were critically injured in the incident, which took place at the Gobindapur railway gate. The Railways has ruled out any glitch in the signalling system and said the gateman on duty was at fault.

The gateman, Arup Karmakar, has been arrested. Also, the section supervisor has been placed under immediate suspension.

The incident took place between Karnasubarna and Gobindapur stations during the morning rush hour. According to police and eyewitnesses, around 6.20 am, the railway crossing was closed for Nabadwip-Balughat Express. The train passed, and the crossing was opened. Three vehicles, including the school van, moved to cross the tracks.

At this point, the Nimtita-Katwa passenger train, which had received a green signal, came down the tracks at high speed. While two vehicles managed to cross in time, the school van and a cyclist were hit by the incoming train.

Among the victims identified so far are Jessica Yasmin (9), Farhana Sultana (6), and the 65-year-old cyclist, Jamshed Ali. Four others, including school children Tamanna, Ishan, and Anisha, and the van driver, Mosharraf Hossain, have suffered serious injuries and are under treatment at the Murshidabad Medical College and Hospital.

Chief Minister Suwendu Adhikari said the incident was the result of a "human error". "It is a very painful incident. West Bengal police have arrested the gateman. I have asked the police to check if he was intoxicated," Adhikari told reporters.

A senior official described the incident not as a mechanical failure, but as a human lapse.

Investigators are currently probing whether the gateman was under the influence of alcohol. An ex gratia of Rs 10 lakh each was released Friday to the next of kin of all five deceased persons. Besides, Rs 2.5 lakh each was released to the seriously injured persons, and Rs 50,000 each to those who sustained minor injuries, the Eastern Railway said Friday.

'Grieving' elephant that chased vehicles for 3 yrs after truck killed its herd captured

Sreenivas Janyala
Hyderabad, July 17

AN ELEPHANT that lost all other members of its herd in a highway accident in the Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh three years ago, and subsequently went on a rampage raiding crops, attacking livestock and leaving villagers terrorised in the Palamaner forest division, was finally captured and taken to an elephant camp for veterinary and behavioural assessments.

Officials described the elephant as "grieving", making its behaviour unpredictable and potentially dangerous to people as well as to itself.

The sub-adult tusker was part of a herd of four, including two sub-adult males, one female, and a calf. On the night of June 14, 2023, a speeding truck rammied into the herd while the elephants were crossing the Bengaluru-Chennai National Highway (NH-4) near Pala-maner. Three elephants died, but this one escaped without any injuries.

"This elephant lost its herd and became a grieving, solitary animal. Since the tragedy, it has frequently returned to the area where the accident occurred, crossing the NH-4 at unpredictable times. It became a threat not only to people on the highway, but also to itself as the possibility of another accident was high," Conservator of Forests, Anantapur Circle, R Yashoda Bai, told The Indian Express.

"It was not eating properly, chewing up garbage and trash, and its health was deteriorating. Villagers were also complaining about it. It had to be rescued," Yashoda Bai added.

The forest department was continuously monitoring the elephant's movements and behaviour, and had spent considerable resources to keep it and the people who live in the area safe, officials explained.

'I thought I was going to die'

During one of its many runs with people, the elephant fell on top of Palamaner Forest Division Forest Section Officer S Sukumar.

"I thought I was going to die. Imagine an elephant falling on you," he said, recalling the incident.

The incident happened on September 13, 2025, when the elephant was aggressively pursuing vehicles and people on NH-4. Sukumar and forest department tracker B Hari were trying to drive the elephant away when, even though it initially ran towards the forest, it suddenly turned around and charged at the duo.

In the subsequent chase, the elephant slipped and fell on Sukumar. After a few minutes, the confused elephant found its footing, stood up and ran away. A seriously injured Sukumar was admitted to a hospital and spent weeks recovering. Months later, this week, he took part in the operation to capture the elephant.

G Subburaj, District Forest Officer, Chittoor, said that it took months of monitoring and planning to capture the elephant safely.

"This young elephant would have been happy and safe with its herd. Instead, it was lonely and disoriented with frequent mood swings," he said.

While the elephant showed aggression towards humans, it fled when forest guards or trackers approached it on "kumki" elephants — trained captive elephants used to capture or rescue wild elephants.

"We realised that it ran away because these [kumki] elephants were older and bigger. When we used young elephants of the same age as this elephant, it approached and tried to be friendly. It appeared that the young kumki elephants were trying to console him. This helped a lot in planning and managing the operation to capture it," said Yashoda Bai.

Since the 2023 accident, the elephant had continued to chase people, particularly two-wheeler riders, besides repeatedly damaging crops. It had also become a risk to itself on the NH-4.

Sophisticated operation

The Forest Department submitted proposals seeking permission to capture the elephant. After detailed examination of the field situation, permission was accorded by the Principal Chief Conservator of Forests (Wildlife) and the Chief Wildlife Warden under the provisions of the Wildlife (Protection) Act, 1972.

Following approval, the Forest Department constituted an Advisory Committee, Field Capture Team, veterinary teams, tracking teams, logistics teams and communication teams. Using drones and thermal sensor cameras, continuous monitoring of the elephant was undertaken to confirm its identity, study its behaviour, map its movement pattern, and identify suitable capture sites.

Risk assessments were carried out to identify safe darting locations, emergency evacuation routes and transportation logistics. Simultaneously, coordination meetings were held with the police, Revenue, Health, Animal Husbandry, Fire Services and other line departments to ensure seamless support during the operation.

It was also decided to deploy five trained Kumki elephants from the Musalimadugu Elephant Camp, where elephants are trained.

Finally, on July 15, the elephant was captured near Palamaner, not far from where it lost its herd.

The whole operation cost around Rs 5 lakh.

The elephant was transported to Musalimadugu Elephant Camp, where it will remain under veterinary observation and a behavioural assessment will be carried out.

Deputy Chief Minister and the Minister for Forests and Environment, K Pawan Kalyan, praised the operation and commended the Forest department for balancing public safety with wildlife conservation.

After train chase, 2 criminals shot in UP police operation

Manish Sahu
Lucknow, July 17

WHAT BEGAN as a police operation to arrest two wanted men on a train ended in a child being held at gunpoint, two policemen being shot, and both suspects killed in separate encounters in Uttar Pradesh's Firozabad district on Friday afternoon, police said.

Police said the two men, wanted in robbery and snatching cases, were travelling on a train from Ghaziabad to Jharkhand, which was scheduled to halt at Shikohabad railway station in Firozabad.

Acting on a tip-off, a police team from Etawah travelled nearly 81 km to Shikohabad and laid a trap at the railway station.

According to police, when officers boarded the train to locate them, the assailants got off.

One of them allegedly grabbed a nine-year-old child, who was heading home from school, outside the station and held a pistol to the child's head. Police claimed they used the child as a human shield while firing at the pursuing officers.

Police said the accused eventually let the child go. However, they allegedly snatched a motorcycle from a passerby and sped away while continuing to fire shots. Constable David Chauhan sustained a gunshot wound to the abdomen during the exchange, police said.

Police chased them on their motorcycles. After a distance, the suspects abandoned the vehicle and fled in different directions, police said.

The pursuing team split into two and gave chase. "One of the assailants, Sumit Yadav alias Vivek, opened fire. Police fired back; he sustained gunshot wounds and died," said a police officer.

Police said the second suspect, Ankit alias Seepu, fled into nearby fields. Police gave chase for 2km before reinforcements from the Firozabad Police joined the pursuit. Ankit fired at them, said police, and a second constable, Pushpendra Chaudhary, suffered a gunshot wound to the shoulder. Despite the injuries to their colleague, officers said the police teams continued the chase, surrounding the suspect in the fields. Another exchange of fire followed and Ankit was shot, they said. He later died of injuries.

Additional Director General of Police (Agra Zone) S K Bhagat, who reached the scene after the incident, said the confrontation took place in broad daylight after police tracked the two suspects following a tip-off. He said officers pursued the pair after they allegedly held a child at gunpoint while trying to evade arrest.

Sumit was a resident of Lucknow and Ankit was from Etawah. Both were in their 20s and carried rewards of Rs 25,000 each, police said.

Police records stated that Sumit had 26 criminal cases, while Ankit had three criminal cases registered against him.

Police said Ankit, was wanted in connection with a chain-snatching case registered at Ekdil police station on July 3 while Sumit was wanted in a robbery case registered at Chaubia police station.

Both injured constables from the Etawah police, also in their 20s, are undergoing treatment.

ORIGINAL PETITIONER, A BREAST CANCER PATIENT, DIED DURING PENDENCY OF PROCEEDINGS

SC takes cognizance of delay in cases involving access to life-saving drugs

Directs Kerala High Court to ensure matter is disposed of expeditiously

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

THE SUPREME Court on Friday took suo motu cognisance of delays in cases involving access to life-saving drugs after a pending Kerala HC matter over a breast cancer drug came to its notice.

A bench headed by Chief Justice of India Surya Kant and comprising Justices Joyimalya Bagchi and V Mohana, hearing the case 'In Re: Access to Life Saving Medicines and Judicial Expediency in Article 21 Matters', referred to the Kerala HC proceedings on Ribociclib, a patented medicine used in the treatment of HR-positive, HER2-negative breast cancer, which had been listed 57 times without reaching a conclusion.

The court said it will issue notice in the case. It also directed the Kerala HC to take up its pending suo motu proceedings at the earliest. It noted that once the HC decodes the matter and issues directions, those may be followed on a pan-India basis.

The case pertains to bringing down Ribociclib's price through domestic manufacture, a request the Centre rejected on the grounds that breast cancer did not meet the threshold of national urgency.

The original petitioner, a breast cancer patient, died during the pendency of the proceedings.

The HC then expanded the scope of the matter and converted it into a suo motu PIL concerning the pricing and accessibility of life-saving medicines.

The SC's intervention follows a July 10 representation to the Chief Justice of the Kerala

HC, with copies to the President and the CJI, from Jyotsna Singh and KM Gopakumar, co-convenors of the Working Group on Access to Medicines and Treatment. The letter sought urgent administrative intervention to fast-track the case, noting that pleadings had long concluded even as the matter kept coming up without a final hearing.

The representation stated that Ribociclib costs Rs 78,468 per month and remains under patent protection. It said the original petition sought a government-use licence under the Patents Act to facilitate the manufacture of a lower-cost version of the medicine.

The group said that "the untimely demise of the petitioner in this matter highlights the devastating human cost of judicial delays in cases involving access to lifesaving drugs".

On July 15, the Kerala HC, in the suo motu PIL titled 'In Re Exorbitant Pricing of Life Saving Patented Medicines sought expert opinions from the National Cancer Institute, Chittaranjan National Cancer Institute, Regional Cancer Centre, Thiruvananthapuram and the Drugs Controller General of India on whether Palbociclib, a less expensive medicine available in India, could serve as an alternative to Ribociclib and Abemaciclib.

With drug body's clearance, Wegovy is first GLP-1 for adults with fatty liver

Express News Service
New Delhi, July 17

THE CENTRAL Drugs Standard Control Organisation (CDSCO) has given its nod for the use of Novo Nordisk's Wegovy (semaglutide 2.4 mg) for the treatment of fatty liver disease, now called MASH (Metabolic Dysfunction-Associated Steatohepatitis).

MASH is a serious, progressive form of fatty liver disease that can lead to chronic inflammation and liver damage. This is the first time an injectable GLP-1 therapy has been approved for such use in India other than obesity. GLP-1 drugs mimic a natural gut hormone that regulates blood sugar, reduces appetite, and slows digestion.

The approval came after Wegovy cleared the ESSENCE trial, in which the drug resolved steatohepatitis among 63% of patients tested and reduced liver fibrosis in 37% of patients.

Semaglutide was found to directly reduce liver fat, inflammation, and scarring. For treatment, a shot of 2.4 mg can be administered.

The development is significant, as two in three Indians report fatty liver disease. MASH is a result of excess fat buildup in the liver, causing chronic inflammation and liver damage. It is a silent disease and symptoms don't appear until the disease has progressed to an advanced stage. Wegovy can work in adults with moderate to advanced liver fibrosis - stages F2 to F3 - along with a reduced calorie diet and increased physical activity.

Vikrant Shrotriya, MD, Novo Nordisk India, said, "The burden of MASH continues to rise in India, but treatment options are still limited. People with MASH face a higher risk of serious liver complications and heart-related diseases. That is why we need treatment options that can address these connected health risks. This approval will also help address obesity and related heart and metabolic diseases."

Gujarat ATS arrests five more with Jaish links; 13 held so far

THE GUJARAT Anti-Terrorist Squad (ATS) has arrested five men allegedly linked to Jaish-e-Mohammed (JeM), nearly two weeks after it arrested eight others for their association with the terror outfit, the agency said on Friday.

Out of the five men, four are from Siddhpur in Patan district. This takes the total arrests from the town to eight. The fifth suspect is from Banaskantha.

All five face charges of trying to carry out "test explosions" on at least eight occasions over the last three years.

Police identified the suspects from Siddhpur as Bilal Abid Shera, 24; Mohammad Ayyub Kadiwala, 22; Mohammad Ayyub Sunsara alias Mohammad Khali, 20 and Mohammad Hasan Hanif Kardiya alias Hasan Haiderpuri, 20. Shafi Raees Mukhi alias Shafi Chhapi, 21, is from Vadgam, Banaskantha.

The ATS alleged that Bilal Abid Shera gave a pen drive to Amin Shera that had "jihadi speeches, videos, and jihadi books of Jaish-e-Mohammed terrorist Masood Azhar, which were subsequently printed from various locations".

On July 2, a case was registered against eight men at the Anti-Terrorist Squad police station on charges of terror financing, conspiracy, membership in a terrorist organisation, supporting a terror organisation, etc under the UAPA and conspiracy charges.

The Anti-Terrorist Squad said it recovered a JeM flag, a copy of books written by JeM founder Masood Azhar, a copy of a letter addressed to Azhar, and Rs 1.30 lakh in cash, suspected to be funds for terrorist activities, from the first group of accused.

PM flags off India's first hydrogen train: 2-hour Jind-Sonipat travel, 14 halts and zero emission

With 10 coaches, it can carry maximum of 2,600 passengers; 2 round trips a day

Dheeraj Mishra
Jind, July 17

INDIA JOINED a select group of nations on Friday as Prime Minister Narendra Modi flagged off the country's first hydrogen-powered train connecting Jind and Sonipat in Haryana — a significant achievement for the Indian Railways in the use of zero emission, clean fuel technology.

The first hydrogen-powered non-AC passenger train will cover the 89-km Jind-Sonipat railway section in around two hours, running at a maximum operational speed of 75 kmph. The journey includes halts at 14 stations. The Northern Railway is expected to soon announce the date for the commencement of commercial operations.

After flagging off the train from Jind, Modi said, "Even today, we read that India's first train ran between Bombay — now Mumbai — and Thane [in 1853]. Similarly, whenever hydrogen trains are mentioned in the future, the names of Jind, Sonipat and Haryana will inevitably be mentioned."

"If we look at the history of railways, the 19th century was defined by steam engines. The 20th century was characterized by diesel and electric trains, and now, the 21st century belongs to hydrogen-powered trains. Today, Indian Railways has taken a major step forward with this 21st century technology," said Modi.

The train was essentially created by replacing the diesel engines on old diesel electric multiple unit (DEMU) rakes with a zero-emission hydrogen-electric propulsion system. The train will make two round trips a day, covering 356 km and consuming around 300 kg of hydrogen. For refuelling, a 3,000-kg hydrogen capacity storage plant has been developed in Jind.

The Prime Minister said there are immense possibilities of expansion. "We will continue researching how to reduce costs, how to increase efficiency, and step by step, after thorough investigation, we will keep moving forward. Hydrogen trains have only recently come into existence in the world only around 7-8 years ago. Currently, only three or four countries in the world have the capability to run hydrogen trains. And even in those countries, hydrogen trains are still in their early stages," he said.

With 3200 horsepower (HP), the 10-coach train — eight passenger and two driving power cars — can carry a maximum of 2,600 passengers. It is equipped with 15 hydrogen leak detectors, seven heat detectors and three flame detectors.

"Not only the most powerful, India's hydrogen train is also the longest. In other countries, hydrogen trains run with three or four coaches. But India, in its very first attempt, has run a 10-coach hydrogen train," the PM said. Chandrakant Kumar, the train's additional loco pilot, said he underwent training in Shakurbasti in Delhi and Integral Coach Factory in Chennai, but added that "there is not much of a difference between driving the hydrogen train and DEMU train".

"Since hydrogen is very flammable, the safety standards in the train are very high. Leak detectors have been installed in the train and the system will shut down automatically in case of such an incident," said Kumar.

"There is 440 kg of hydrogen at a 350 bar pressure on the train — 220 kg in each driving power car — from where the fuel cell will take the hydrogen to produce electrical energy. It will take around four hours to refill the hydrogen cylinders on board from the plant. There are eight fans and six CCTVs in each driving power car. The hydrogen leak detectors and flame detectors are installed at the plants as well."

Nitin Parikh, a train manager on board, said the primary job is to run the train safely and on time. "However, it is great that we have accepted the new and clean technology for Railways. It will help in cutting down the emission significantly. In this train, the emission is only the water vapour. This is not the main line, but the branch line and number of passengers are higher."

On board the country's first hydrogen train were students of Nav Vidya Senior Secondary School, Jind. "It is a beautiful train. I am a Class 9 student and I have learnt how electrolysis splits water into hydrogen and oxygen. I have not travelled very far by train yet. I want to travel to Delhi by train," said Alisha, as the train chugged off from Jind.

Other projects

Modi also inaugurated the Haryana section of the Delhi-Amritsar-Katra Expressway (158 km), the Jind-Gohana National Highway (40.60 km), Ambala-Kala Amb four-lane highway (33.81 km) and Sikh museum in Kurukshetra. The PM laid the foundation stone and inaugurated various projects worth around Rs 14,700 crore in Jind.

Referring to the West Asia conflict, he said that due to 99% electrification of Railways, trains ran continuously despite the oil crisis in the wake of the Strait of Hormuz situation.

India raises with US issues of students, travellers: MEA on new visa rule

BJP's Punjab reset: How the party is trying to reinvent itself before elections

A WEEKLY DISPATCH ON THE POLITICS AND IDEAS SHAPING NORTH INDIA

PRIME MINISTER Narendra Modi's second visit to Punjab this year, coming barely a month after BJP national president Nitin Nabin's three-day tour of the state, is a clear signal that after decades in a supporting role in Punjab politics, the BJP now wants to take centre stage ahead of the 2027 Assembly elections.

Emboldened by its win in West Bengal, the other defiant border state, the BJP believes it has a chance in Punjab despite the lingering scars of the 2020 farm law protests that left it isolated.

For most of its history since 1980, the BJP was content to play second fiddle to the Shiromani Akali Dal, contesting just 23 of the Assembly's 117 seats. The alliance, famously described by the late five-time Chief Minister Parkash Singh Badal as a "nau-maas da rishta" (the relationship between nail and flesh)", was seen as a guarantor of communal harmony after the divisive years of militancy. Even before the BJP, the Akalis had repeatedly partnered with its precursor, the Bharatiya Jana Sangh, often after elections, to cobble together governments.

The two parties first joined hands in 1952 to form the state's first non-Congress government. Another post-poll arrangement followed the 1967 elections in reorganised Punjab despite Jana Sangh founding leader Yagya Dutt Sharma's earlier fast-unto-death against the creation of a Sikh-majority state. Political expediency, it seemed, eventually trumped ideological differences.

Yet, reducing the alliance to electoral arithmetic alone misses the larger story. The partnership reflected Punjab itself, whose people have long resisted religious binaries despite petty quibbles.

Punjab's social fabric resembles its Phulkari: a tapestry of multiple colours. Hindus and Sikhs have long shared language, customs, marriages and, in many families, bloodlines.

Of course, the state has its fair share of exclusionist voices. Some panthic groups pooh-

PM Narendra Modi in Jalandhar on Friday. ANI

pooh any suggestion that Sikhism emerged from Hinduism, while some Hindu organisations like to portray Sikhs merely as the "sword arm of Hinduism". Yet both remain on the fringes. Outside Punjab, people from the state tend to wear their Punjabi identity on their sleeve, not their religion. Hence the boisterous declarations of Duniya vich log vasde bathere, Punjabiyan di shaan vakhri (there are many people in the world but none like the Punjabis) and Diljit Dosanjh's triumphant Punjabi aa gaye oye (Punjabis have arrived). Modesty is not our strong suit.

Although Sikhs account for about 58% of the population and Hindus around 38% as per the 2011 Census, neither community has historically voted as a bloc. It's ditto for Dalits, who comprise over 32% of the population, the highest proportion among states. Punjab has consistently rewarded parties that build broad social coalitions instead of relying only on religious or caste mobilisation. Even the panthic Akali Dal fielded numerous Hindu candidates in its heyday.

BJP recasts itself

The 2024 Lok Sabha election reinforced that lesson for the BJP. Despite around 50% Hindu voters in constituencies such as Gurdaspur and Anandpur Sahib, the party failed to win a single seat. It did, however, almost double its vote share to around 19%, overtaking the Akali Dal.

Since then, the BJP has sought to recast itself. No longer focused primarily on Hindu consolidation, it is attempting to project itself as a party comfortable with Punjab's layered identity. The transformation is visible in both leadership and symbolism. Former Congress leaders, first Sunil Jakhar and now Kewal Singh Dhillon, head the state unit. It's a running joke that the BJP is a disciplined "Congress in a new bottle". It has also added leaders from the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP).

Embracing the language of Punjabiyat. New offices are inaugurated with Sukhmani Sahib path — recitation of hymns composed by the fifth Guru, Guru Arjan Dev Ji — and Jo bole so nihali — the traditional Sikh slogan that translates to "Whoever utters the phrase shall be blessed" — now regularly echoes at BJP events, and senior leaders maintain ties with religious leaders such as Damdami Taksal chief Baba Harnam Singh Dhumma. Friday marked the Prime Minister's second meeting this year with Dera Sachkhand Ballian chief Sant Niranjan Dass, the spiritual leader of the numerically significant Ravidassia community.

During his recent New Zealand visit, PM Modi highlighted initiatives such as Veer Bal Diwas observed to honour the martyrdom of the sons of Guru Gobind Singh, FCRA clearance for the Golden Temple, bringing copies of the Guru Granth Sahib from Afghanistan and preserving Sikh relics.

The party has also deployed former diplomat and Delhi Lieutenant Governor Taranjit Singh Sandhu to build a rapport with opinion-makers in the state, often in their drawing rooms.

The balancing act was visible in its reaction to the film Satluj as well. So while Union Minister Ravneet Bittu lashed out, calling it one-sided for not showing the killings of Hindus by militants, many others defended it.

Whether this strategy succeeds depends less on organisational engineering than on collective memory. The scars of the farm agitation remain, as does Punjab's long-held suspicion of the Dilli durbar. Electoral maths can be worked out. Trust cannot. And in Punjab, it is trust that will decide whether the BJP's reset succeeds or stalls.

The delimitation debate is a fight over the wrong number

PRAVEEN CHAKRAVARTY

PARLIAMENT'S FIRST power is the power of the purse: Its central task is to scrutinise how money is collected and where it goes. Money is raised from taxes and logically, richer states contribute more. It is then spent on people's welfare and justifiably, poorer states receive more.

Tamil Nadu, Karnataka and Telangana contribute roughly 20 per cent of all taxes (direct plus indirect) while Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and Madhya Pradesh contribute 6 per cent. Clearly, the three richer southern states account for significantly higher contributions to the Union government's tax kitty. Five years ago, the three southern states contributed 18 per cent to the nation's taxes while the latter group of states accounted for 7 per cent. So, the share of the southern states in India's tax revenues is only rising while that of the latter is declining.

At the same time, these three southern states account for 13 per cent of the population while the three northern states account for 33 per cent. Ten years ago, the three southern states had 14 per cent of India's population and the northern states 32 per cent. Ten years from now, only 12 per cent of the population will be from these southern states and 34 per cent from the latter group of northern states. Evidently, the share of population of southern states is only decreasing while that of the latter is increasing. So, in India, states' share of revenues and population seem to go in opposite directions.

Poorer states need greater funds and are also more populous with higher birth rates. Richer states contribute more money and tend to be less populous with falling birth rates. If the financial oversight function of Parliament includes both collecting and spending money, then isn't it logical to expect representation for states proportionate to their contribution to tax collections as well as to their spending needs? Put simply, why Indian Express @ 4:00 a.m. <https://whatsapp.com/channel/0029Van2VRb6RGJOKH6oBd0F> is a state's share of contribution to the Union tax kitty not a factor in determining its share of representation in Parliament, while only its share of population is counted as a factor? Especially when the share of contribution and population are inversely related.

The idea of a population-based representative democracy with a decadal census to measure the size of population and redraw constituencies was right at a time of rampant slavery and agrarian economies in 1787, when James Madison drafted it in the US Constitution. Back then, an elected representative physically carried the concerns of a fixed body of people, and there were natural limits to how many one person could reach, canvass and answer to. Roughly equal numbers of people per seat were a fair proxy for roughly equal access and equal voice.

But what is so sacrosanct about it being the sole determinant of share of representation today? In 2026, a Member of Parliament who wants to reach her voters does not walk the district. She sends a message, and it lands with 100,000 people or a million for the same effort and the same cost. The point is

What is so sacrosanct about it being the sole determinant of share of representation today? In 2026, a Member of Parliament who wants to reach her voters does not walk the district. She sends a message deliberately provocative: Population is no longer a good measure of the burden of representation, because technology has dissolved that burden.

"Equal population per seat" bundles two different claims. One is practical: A representative can only serve so many, so seats should be sized to a manageable number. The other is moral: Every citizen is equal, so every vote should carry equal weight. Technology has hollowed out the first claim. It has not touched the second. No one can argue that an Indian in Kanpur deserves less voice than an Indian in Coimbatore.

This is not a plea to let rich states buy votes, nor to price a citizen's franchise by her tax receipt. Every individual's vote stays exactly equal. But delimitation is not about the individual vote. It is about the collective weight of a state in the national legislature — and in a federation, that cannot be settled by headcount alone. So, the question is not whether every citizen should count equally — of course they should — but whether a state's collective leverage in Parliament should track only its population or be more holistic.

Parliament's job is to decide how Indian Express @ 4:00 a.m. https://t.me/+2RvD_RGf9mljMzg1 the Union's money is raised and spent. States that supply a larger share of that money must be given their due share of voice in Parliament. But this does not mean money should be the only measure. This is of course not a call to hark back to the days of voting rights only for taxpayers. It is a call for the Delimitation Commission to come to terms with the realities of 21st-century Indian federalism and arrive at a more comprehensive formula for share in Parliament just as the Finance Commission does for share in taxes.

The current formula of a population-only based delimitation exercise only elicits warped and regressive ideas such as Chandrababu Naidu and M K Stalin urging families in their states to have more children and coming up with "PLI" schemes for "baby production". Not out of any theory of human flourishing, but just to defend seats in a future delimitation and prevent migrant labour from other states.

Change the denominator and the whole conversation changes with it. No chief minister has to treat childbirth as a seat-protection strategy. If share of taxes is also factored in for share in Parliament, then the other vexatious issue of inter-state migration will become less political. After all, migrant labour contributes to the economy and taxes of the state. There is already an irony in the arithmetic: Much of the tax revenue Karnataka and Tamil Nadu remit is generated by workers who migrated from the very states now poised to gain seats, and who are still counted in the populations they left.

And so, the argument between states shifts from babies and migrants to development and finance, which is the argument a serious federation ought to be having in the first place.

The delimitation fight is a fight over the wrong number — which census year to use? The real question is: Should population be the sole determinant of parliamentary representation? The denominator should be some combination of population and economic contribution that reflects not just how many people a state has, but how much their state contributes to the national whole.

Satluj silences: The answer to this film is another film

MADHU TREHAN

THERE ARE moments in Satluj when the Punjab Police's unscrupulous methods crush your heart. In 1988, while covering Punjab, I witnessed the horrific brutality unleashed on ordinary people by terrorists fighting for Khalistan. My heart got crushed then, too. This half of the story is completely missing in the film.

Satluj tells the story of people whose search for justice was thwarted at every turn. It takes us through Jaswant Singh Khrala's quest for accountability from the police for thousands of people who disappeared. But as in almost all stories, there are many sides to it. Satluj completely excludes the violence and horrors unleashed by the terrorists.

It was October 1988, as I edited a video — 'The Children of Punjab' — the aura of grief was overwhelming. An eight-year-old boy said, "Punjab used to be a beautiful place. Now we live frightened that any moment the terrorists will come to our house." Then he broke down and said in Punjabi, "Auntieji, you have no idea how much we have suffered." His 18-year-old brother had been gunned down by terrorists. The little one missed him bitterly. A child blinded by a bomb blast in a bus. At the time of the interview, he did not know that when they removed the bandages from his eyes, he would be blind. His mother at his bedside was struck mute in shock. Two eight-year-old neighbours who played with each other every day killed by a bomb at the same spot. One Hindu, the other Sikh. Both families melted into each other with grief.

After Indira Gandhi was killed in 1984 by her Sikh bodyguards and the subsequent horrific massacre of Sikhs that followed in Delhi, anger in Punjab spiralled. Thousands joined the terrorists who believed in creating an independent Khalistan. Rajiv Gandhi, well aware of K P S Gill's reputation from his tenure in Assam, appointed him to quell the violence in Punjab. What followed was a case of: To cure the disease you kill the patient. Kanwaljit Singh, who plays DGP Inderpal Singh Bitta, gets Gill unmistakably.

As the film portrays, Gill and his men were ruthless. Interviewed later about missing young men, Gill was without remorse. In his eyes, he was a soldier at war and in war the enemy must be obliterated. But in war, the uniform identifies your enemy. Gill did what is now called profile targeting with out accountability. Young men were pulled off buses, trains, motorcycles and marched off never to be seen again. The police covered their tracks and destroyed files of arrests, deaths and cremations.

The barbarity of the Khalistan fighters was even worse and the statistics are staggering. Hindus were segregated and shot mercilessly, including women and children. The fighters for Khalistan conducted fierce attacks on civilians and officials, leaving over 21,000 dead. 38 Hindus were pulled off a bus and shot dead in Lalru in July 1987. The next day, 34 Hindu passengers were shot in Fatehabad. In June 1991, 76 Hindus on a train near Ludhiana were massacred. In December 1991, 52 more Hindus were killed in another train attack. In June 1991, 126 migrants on trains from UP and Bihar were slaughtered. Extremists planted a bomb aboard Air India Flight 182. The aircraft exploded mid-air over the Atlantic Ocean, killing all 329 passengers on board, including 82 children.

Chief Minister of Punjab Beant Singh, General Arun Vaidya and Lala Jagat Narain were all murdered. Dozens of lower-court judges, magistrates, and the families of Punjab Police personnel were targeted and killed. The police and government have to face accountability. That's what Satluj demands. But why is the same criteria not applied to the terrorists who committed unspeakable acts? Does this justify Gill's crackdown? The norm at that time and habit of bumping off any person who was a nuisance does become just that. A habit. Khrala is portrayed as a human rights activist seeking answers through all the proper channels. Yes, that is partially correct. The massive omission is that Khrala was a propagandist for the terrorists whose violent methods he supported. He founded, wrote for and edited Liberation Khalistan while in the UK in the 1990s. He was general secretary of the human rights wing of the Shiromani Akali Dal. Khrala represented insurgents in international forums as innocents whose human rights to self-determination were being met with violent state oppression.

The ending of the film romanticises Khrala's last words. He speaks of his reason for dying and not giving in. He expresses that his death will be a diya (lamp) that will light up the darkness in the world. Question: Perhaps the diya could also ignite a fire?

The film is banned in India. Counterproductive, because people find a way to see it, as I did. Satluj tells a story that had to be told. It is not the whole story. It is worrisome that the youth in Punjab could be triggered by what is portrayed. If Punjab teaches us anything, it is that once we tell only half the story, the next generation mistakes it for the whole truth. I reported one part of that history. The film tells another. Punjab deserves to remember both.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Symbol of justice

IT IS sad that the government has not deemed it necessary to engage with the protesters at Jantar Mantar ('Government must talk to Sonam Wangchuk, that's its duty', IE, July 16). Lying on an improvised stage, Sonam Wangchuk has become a symbol of the fight for justice for students. Given its approach, the government may resort to force-feeding him rather than acceding to his just demands. Its lack of sensitivity is unworthy of a democracy. We urge Sonam Wangchuk to break his fast. We want him to live to serve the nation.

NATO and India

CHANGING GLOBAL security challenges require India to build practical partnerships while preserving its strategic autonomy ('NATO's transformation opens possibilities for India', IE, July 17). Cooperation with NATO members in areas such as defence technology, cybersecurity and maritime security can strengthen national capabilities without compromising an independent foreign policy. India should continue expanding defence research, manufacturing and innovation while engaging with like-minded partners whose interests converge.

Fixing accountability

THE ARTICLE rightly questions the growing tendency to avoid responsibility when public failures occur ('No one did it, it happens: War to exam scandals, pollution to crumbling cities', IE, July 17). Accountability cannot end with routine inquiries. Citizens deserve clear answers, timely action and consequences for negligence. Public institutions should strengthen monitoring systems, fix responsibility at every level and make investigation reports accessible. Accepting mistakes is not a weakness but the first step towards better governance. Trust in institutions grows only when accountability becomes a consistent practice rather than an occasional response.

SUMANA ROY

EPW IS a good acronym. It feeds off the established seriousness of the EPW, the Economic and Political Weekly. And perhaps because it begins with "E", it also hides the low energy. I propose the registration of the Exhausted Wives' Party as a political bloc. "E" words have been ruling our world — email, e-commerce, e-business, e-wallet. Half the world, or at least much of the married world, has been speaking of another "e". Exhaustion. But perhaps because women have to say everything a few times to be heard (I wish we were like OTPs that didn't work if not paid attention right away), no one's noticed; or it comes with our condition of existence, like having anaemia.

It's the collective exhaustion of women that I felt as I read two books recently — one by a man, the other by a woman. The first by the historian Gyanendra Pandey, Men at Home: Imagining Liberation in Colonial and Postcolonial India, a book — I am still surprised at my audacity — I read in the confessional tradition: A man's belated admission of female labour that allows everything, including his discipline, to live and prosper. As I read through the list of famous men who built their careers on the unacknowledged labour of women, Mohandas Gandhi, Babasaheb Ambedkar, Rahul Sankrityayan, and others, I found myself adding other names: Men in my family, friends, colleagues, neighbours, writers and artists I knew,

Multitasking was sold to us like the smartphone — that it was possible for one device to do everything; that women could be like the multifunctional kitchen gadgets they used, the OTG, or the mixer-grinder

even admired. "Men touched food — to eat, though not to cook or prepare it. They touched beds, or sheets, or makeshift mattresses on the floor — to sleep, but not to tidy or clean them," writes Pandey.

The other book is Mannu Bhandari's memoir, This Too is a Story. Reading about her husband, the Hindi writer Rajendra Yadav, who justified his adulterous life by "sometimes invoking modernity, sometimes in the name of his writing and sometimes some other concocted bit of philosophy that could prove him right", I found myself thinking of the male professors at Indian universities who taught feminist theory.

What Bhandari writes about her husband applies equally to their lives: "According to him, a wife should be like a nurse whose job was to serve her husband without expecting anything in return." There's a semiotic of this division everywhere — women exhausted from gathering, cutting, cooking for a puja, a male priest who arrives after the arrangement is done and chants the mantras; women carrying a child for nine months, whose surname comes from the man.

As I was finishing reading Bhandari's memoir, I read about Becca Scott in The Independent. She'd been diagnosed with chronic fatigue syndrome. "When she left her husband, it disappeared." The symptoms are all around us, exhaustion churning into anger, in films like Juice or Mrs., and now even condensed cheekily into a slogan on a tee: "Thak gayi".

Multitasking was sold to us like the smartphone — that it was possible for one device to do everything; that women could be like the multifunctional kitchen gadgets they used, the OTG, or the mixer-grinder. There's a reason it's called "running" a family. Running a marathon at a sprinter's speed between home and the workplace, caregiving and childrearing, conventions and capitalism, archiving to-do lists in the head without a pause button, plumbing the imagination necessary to fix menus thrice a day, every day of being alive, the emotional labour of explanations and discussions that have the boniness of arguments, and pleas to be seen as someone whose engine is struggling to reach ignition temperature. And — always living on the "and" — living on the conjunction while breaking apart, always falling behind, always catching up, always apologising for having forgotten something, always thinking of the next thing to be done.

Occasionally, when I have the opportunity to catch a young couple on screen waiting to say "the three words" to each other, it's not "I love you" that I'm able to think of but "I am exhausted". The protocol for responding to "I love you" is to add "too". Here too, almost: "We are exhausted doing the work of two." This too is a story.

RAKESH KACKER AND CHITRAKSHI JAIN

A DIVISION BENCH of the Supreme Court recently dismissed a batch of appeals involving the Indian Railways. The judgment has implications for public and private entities seeking the status of a deemed distribution licensee under the Electricity Act. The APTEL judgment from which the appeals arose had rejected the claim of the Indian Railways to be treated as a deemed distribution licensee, a view that has been upheld by the SC.

The Court was tasked with deciding first whether the Indian Railways qualifies as a deemed distribution licensee. It held that a distribution licensee must not only operate and maintain a distribution system, but it is also required to supply electricity to consumers. Indian Railways does not pass this test unambiguously, for it "operates a closed network for meeting operational requirements of the railways system".

Next, the SC had to decide if the Railways fell within the ambit of "Appropriate Government" under the third proviso to Section 14, which confers deemed licensee status and exempts the entity from obtaining a licence. The Railways had assumed that, as an agency of the Union government, it was entitled to a deemed licence. The Court held that the Railways could not be treated as a deemed licensee because it only bought electricity for self-consumption. It distinguished the Railways from the Military Engineering Services, which supply electricity to residents for cantonments, clarifying that a government entity must perform the function of distribution to different consumers to qualify as a deemed licensee under the third proviso to Section 14. The SC also held that, given that the Railways buys electricity for its own use, like any other consumer, it would have to pay the associated cross-subsidy surcharge and the additional surcharge.

The ruling is significant for several rea-

The Railways will have to compensate the discoms for the surcharges, incurring a steep bill. The decision has implications for other entities who seek the status of deemed licensees sons. The Railways will have to compensate the discoms for the surcharges, resulting in a steep bill that will include backdated dues from different states. The decision has implications for other entities seeking deemed licensee status. In April, the Andhra Pradesh government published a policy framework to promote data centres — new data centres with a minimum connected load of 300 MW could qualify as deemed licensees. The Centre has, in the past, given similar benefits to SEZ developers. The judgment makes it considerably harder for data centres to rely on deemed licence status. Entities may instead have to obtain a regular distribution licence under the Act and satisfy the accompanying regulatory obligations, including demonstrating that they intend to supply electricity to consumers rather than merely consume it themselves.

Uttar Pradesh has a similar policy. In 2023, UPERC granted a distribution licence to NIDP Developers (a data centre developer) under the sixth proviso to Section 14, which allows multiple distribution licensees to operate in the same area. The SC judgment has limited the ability of the Union and state governments and regulators to grant deemed licensee status. It has called into question the order of the Commerce Ministry dated March 3, 2010, which enabled SEZ developers to get a deemed licence. It remains to be seen if the Centre will attempt an amendment of the Electricity Act to restore these powers to governments and regulators.

‘JAN VISHWAS SIDDHANT’ SEEKS TO CREATE A TRUST-BASED REGULATORY ENVIRONMENT

NITI seeks tech firms’ views on content blocking regime

Soumyarendra Barik
New Delhi, July 17

AS PART of its broad deregulation push, government think tank NITI Aayog has turned its eye at India’s expansive tech laws framework — which falls under the domain of the IT Ministry — and has asked major tech companies and start-ups if the country’s current online content blocking requirements and transparency timelines are “feasible.”

It has sought their views on how current legislation can be simplified, The Indian Express has learnt.

The Aayog sought views on a wide range of regulatory issues, covering laws impacting social media companies and other online intermediaries, cybersecurity, data protection, and online gaming, among others.

Executives of technology industry bodies, who represent several Big Tech companies, took part in the meeting held on June 25.

A presentation including questions was shown to the stakeholders during the meeting. In the section covering platform governance, the NITI Aayog asked: “Are current take-down, grievance, and transparency timelines operationally feasible across different categories and sizes of intermediaries?” Another question said: “Which intermediary due diligence obligations impose the highest recurring compliance burden, and what specific operational simplifications would be most impactful?”

Representatives of industry groupings such as Nasscom, Confederation of Indian Industries try (CII), Internet and Mobile Association of India (IAMAI), and Broadband India Forum (BIF), among others, are learnt to have taken part in the meeting. Many of these groups represent major American tech companies such as Facebook, Instagram, and YouTube.

Tech companies, through these industry groupings, are expected to respond along likely lines, and pushback against India’s shortened takedown timelines, as they have done on several occasions, publicly and privately. The NITI Aayog is expected to go through the industry’s responses and then send a detailed note to the IT Ministry for its comments and feedback on the Aayog’s recommendations. The IT Ministry may or may not agree with the Aayog’s recommendations.

Queries sent to the NITI Aayog and IT Ministry did not elicit a response till the publication of this news.

These discussions are happening under the NITI Aayog’s new ‘Jan Vishwas Siddhant’ initiative, an effort at creating a trust-based regulatory environment, under which the government think tank is collecting inputs from various sectors on deregulation and rationalisation of existing laws.

Speaking at the CII Annual Business Summit 2026 earlier this year, NITI Aayog member Rajiv Gauba said that the move was aimed at clearing the system’s “regulatory cholesterol”.

The questions around content takedowns also assume significance as India has stepped up its content blocking ecosystem in recent years, with over 24,000 orders issued in 2025, up from the over 12,000 orders it

THE QUERIES around content takedowns assume significance as India has stepped up content blocking ecosystem, with over 24,000 orders issued in 2025 had issued in 2024, The Indian Express had earlier reported.

In February, the IT Ministry notified amendments to the Information Technology (Intermediary Guidelines and Digital Media Ethics Code) Rules, 2021. One of the changes it has implemented is that social media platforms must now remove problematic content within two-three hours as opposed to 24-36 hours before. Industry executives had earlier said that the new timeline is the shortest takedown window prescribed by any government in the world.

Raising concerns over the shortened takedown timelines, social media giant Meta, which operates platforms like Facebook, Instagram and WhatsApp, had said at the time that the norms might be “challenging” to comply with from an operational standpoint.

Rob Sherman, Meta’s vice president policy and deputy chief privacy officer, said in February that when social media companies receive takedown

RAISING CONCERNS over the recent shortened takedown timelines norms, Meta has said that the it might be “challenging” to comply with notices from the government, there is a certain time it takes for them to investigate and validate the flagged content, and three hours might not be enough time for that.

“Whenever we get the request from the government (to take down content), we will have to look into it, we will have to investigate it and validate it ourselves. And so that’s just something that takes some amount of time, particularly if there’s something that we need to look into. That’s often not possible to turn around in three hours,” he had added.

The Indian Express had earlier also reported that the Centre was exploring allowing the ministries of Home Affairs, External Affairs, Defence, and Information and Broadcasting to issue content blocking orders to social media platforms under Section 69 (A) of the Information Technology (IT) Act, 2000, a power currently available to the IT Ministry. However, the move is currently stalled, it is understood.

Investment Friendliness Index: Gujarat, Maha, TN on top

Pratyush Deep & Ravi Dutta Mishra
New Delhi, July 17

GUJARAT, MAHARASHTRA, Odisha, Tamil Nadu and Goa have emerged as top-performing states in NITI Aayog’s new Investment Friendliness Index 2026, which ranks states based on quality of infrastructure, business climate, government policy and regulatory ease among other parameters seen as key to attracting investment.

“Our investment rate is around 25%. If you look at China, when it was growing fast, it was investing almost double that amount. We are using our capital very efficiently. But if you look at their investment rate and growth rate, you get the incremental capital-output ratio. China’s incremental capital output ratio is much higher. The index is not a ranking exercise; it is to tell the states that there are indicators where you are doing well and parameters where you can do better,” Ashok Lahiri, Vice Chairman, NITI Aayog, said at a press briefing.

The index covers all 28 states and eight union territories (UTs) and evaluates what makes a state attractive for investors, as well as the challenges investors face. The highest weight of 25% is assigned to infrastructure, followed by business climate, resources, government policy, regulatory ease, financial health, institutional environment and environmental resilience. The index categorises Andhra Pradesh, Assam, Chandigarh, Chhattisgarh, Delhi, Haryana, Himachal Pradesh and Karnataka among other states as “frontrunners”.

RBI moves closer to polymer notes, subsidiary floats tender

Siddharth Upasani
New Delhi, July 17

THE RESERVE Bank of India (RBI) is set to trial polymer currency notes, with the Bharatiya Reserve Bank Note Mudran Private Limited (BRBNMPL) on Friday floating a global tender for polymer sheets that will be used to print currency notes at its own presses and that of Security Printing and Minting Corporation of India (SPMCL).

While BRBNMPL is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the RBI, SPMCL is a public sector undertaking. The former designs, manufactures, and supplies banknotes. SPMCL prints them too along with stamp papers, stamps, and other documents such as passports that require security features. The BRBNMPL tender calls for bids for 68,000 reams — one ream comprises 500 sheets — of so-called Biaxially Oriented Polypropylene-based Opacified Polymer Substrate with security features to print the banknotes. The last date to submit bids is August 18.

The tender document said 34,000 reams will be used in the printing of one denomination of notes. As such, the trial will comprise two denominations of notes.

The RBI did not respond to an e-mail seeking comments on the details of the trial.

“The indicative requirement in this EOI is meant for immediate requirement. Once our field trials are successful, we intend to go for procurement of larger quantity of substrate across different denominations and the same is likely to be shared in the upcoming RFP/Final tender or in future tenders which shall follow this EOI (Expression of Interest),” the tender document said.

• PLASTIC CURRENCY

FIRST ISSUED by Australia in 1988, polymer banknotes are now used in over 50 countries and are widely considered far superior to paper notes

A POLYMER note can last anywhere between two to six times longer than a paper note, which means it has a lower environmental impact

BRITISH FIRM De La Rue, which supplies notes to more than half of all central banks, says that polymer notes are cleaner, wipe clean easily, can be recycled, and more secure as most counterfeit notes are produced on paper

It added that bidders must ensure that their operations in Pakistan or China, if any, must be “suitably firewalled” from those in India. No raw materials used to make the India-specific polymer sheets should be procured from China or Pakistan.

Further, a declaration will have to be made that no employee of the bidder who has previously worked or been posted in Pakistan or China, in any capacity, will be engaged for the current procurement process. Pakistani and Chinese nationals or persons of Pakistani or Chinese origin are not to be engaged by bidders for the project. The tender comes after RBI Governor Sanjay Malhotra had said at the post-monetary policy press conference on June 5 that a proposal on polymer notes was “currently under consideration”, although no decision had been taken.

“We are examining the pros and cons of it and whether, you know, it will be worthwhile to do it. It is still at a preliminary stage,” Malhotra had said.

First issued by Australia in 1988, polymer banknotes are now used in more than 50 countries and are widely considered to be far superior to paper notes.

A polymer note can last anywhere between two to six times longer than a paper note, which means it has a lower environmental impact. A longer life means fewer polymer notes need to be manufactured and distributed.

According to British firm De La Rue, which supplies notes to more than half of all central banks, polymer notes are cleaner, wipe clean easily, can be recycled, and more secure as most counterfeit notes are produced on paper.

Counterfeit rates have fallen in countries where currency notes are made of polymer. In 2025-26, the RBI spent Rs 4,875 crore to print currency notes. More than 17,000 crore Indian currency notes — worth Rs 41 lakh crore — were in circulation as on March 31, 2026. Last year, the RBI supplied 2,810 crore pieces of notes. The number of counterfeit notes detected last year rose to 2.3 lakh pieces, up from 2.17 lakh in 2024-25.

RIL Q1 EBITDA up 10%, PAT dips 22% on high base

ENS Economic Bureau
Mumbai, July 17

RELIANCE INDUSTRIES Ltd’s (RIL) consolidated net profit for April-June quarter of FY2027 declined on a year-on-year (y-o-y) basis as an exceptional gain in the year-ago quarter led to a high base effect.

Without considering last year’s exceptional gain of Rs 8,924 crore from its stake sale in Asian Paints, the conglomerate’s net profit rose 6.1% to Rs 23,196 crore.

However, RIL’s consolidated net profit (attributable to the owners) declined 22.4% to Rs 20,946 crore in the June quarter, while its earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation (EBITDA) rose 10.1% to a record Rs 54,067 crore, as per the company.

The company’s consolidated revenue crossed the Rs 3 lakh crore mark to Rs 340,257 crore, up 24.5% from Rs 273,252 crore in the same period a year ago. RIL’s digital arm Jio Platforms made a net profit of Rs

7,764 crore during the June quarter of FY27 as against Rs 7,110 crore a year ago, showing a growth of 9.2%.

Jio extended its leadership in 5G subscriber base with 285 million users as of June 2026, up 73 million over the last 12 months. However, the net profit of Reliance Retail Ventures Ltd declined by 14.2% to Rs 2,806 crore in the June quarter from Rs 3,271 crore a year ago. RIL shares rose by 2.59% to Rs 1326.50 on the BSE on Friday.

The share is down from the 52-week high of Rs 1,611. RIL Chairman and MD Mukesh D. Ambani said Reliance has made a steady start to FY27, with all businesses delivering strong operating performance.

“Our diverse business portfolio has once again demonstrated its resilience in a quarter which witnessed continuing geopolitical tensions and volatile commodity markets,” he said.

AMFI eases process for transfer of MF units to nominees, legal heirs

Akash Mandal
Mumbai, July 17

THE ASSOCIATION of Mutual Funds in India on Friday simplified the process for the transmission of mutual fund units and proceeds following the death of a unit holder.

The move by the mutual fund regulator aims to ensure that the beneficiaries and families of the deceased do not face any hurdles while inheriting these units due to minor discrepancies such as address mismatches.

“In cases where there is a mismatch in the recorded address of the deceased unit holder, Asset Management Companies (AMCs) are now advised to rely on the latest available address details, provided they are supported by relevant documents,” AMFI said in its press release.

In cases of discrepancies in the name or signature of the unit holder, the mutual fund regulator has advised AMCs to adopt a similar framework as provided by the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) pertaining to the issue.

Based on the market regulator’s current framework, AMCs will have to process the transfer request in case of minor discrepancies whilst notifying the unit holder of the mismatch, giving the concerned person a 15-day window to raise any objections.

In case of major discrepancies, AMCs will still have to process the request whilst notifying the concerned party. The concerned person or beneficiary will then have to update their details through an investor service request form, or by visiting the office of the company involved in transferring the units. FULL REPORT ON

SEBI cautions firms against rising ‘Boss Scam’

George Mathew
Mumbai, July 17

THE SECURITIES and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) has cautioned regulated entities and listed companies against a rapidly emerging cyber fraud known as the ‘Boss Scam’, in which fraudsters impersonate CEO or managing director to carry out the crime.

Acting on inputs from the Indian Cyber Crime Coordination Centre (I4C), the market regulator has urged organisations to strengthen internal verification procedures as fraudsters increasingly exploit artificial intelligence, deepfake technology and malicious software to deceive finance officials into transferring funds.

In a press statement issued on Friday, SEBI said cybercriminals are targeting chief executive officers, managing directors and other senior officials by impersonating them through email, WhatsApp, Microsoft Teams and other social media platforms.

The fraudsters send convincing messages or place fake calls to employees, particularly those handling financial transactions, instructing them to make urgent payments to bank accounts controlled by criminals. According to SEBI, the scam typically follows two distinct methods. In the first, fraudsters use advanced deepfake technology, including AI-generated voice cloning and manipulated video calls, to convincingly imitate senior executives.

They may also create fake social media groups or messaging accounts that appear to belong to company leadership. Employees receiving such communications are often pressured into executing immediate fund transfers, it said. The second method involves the distribution of malicious compressed (.zip) files containing executable (.exe) and Dynamic Link Library (.dll) files. These files, once downloaded and opened on Windows computers, install malware capable of compromising the victim’s device.

New core industries index to have iron ore

Siddharth Upasani
New Delhi, July 17

THE COMMERCE ministry will release the updated Index of Core Industries (ICI) next week, with the number of core industries set to increase to nine following the inclusion of iron ore to the existing eight: coal, crude oil, natural gas, refinery products, fertilisers, steel, cement, and electricity.

“In view of the extensive use of iron ore in industrial production and its significant contribution to industrial development, iron ore has been included as a core industry in the revised ICI series. Consequently, the number of core industries has increased from eight to nine,” the Ministry of Commerce & Industry said in a statement on Friday. As per the latest data, core sector growth in May was at a seven-month low of 0.5%. The revised core sector data — which will be released on Monday for the month of June along with a back-series starting April 2023 — continues the government’s overhaul of India’s official statistics in a hectic year.

HISTORY, ALMOST

25 years of Agra Summit, and what lies ahead for India, Pakistan

Given the historical baggage and a series of betrayals by Pakistan — from Kargil to Kandahar — Vajpayee's decision to invite Musharraf to Agra in July 2001 was a bold one. Twenty-five years after the failed Summit, SHUBHAJIT ROY talks to some of the key officials involved to see what that moment holds for the future of the two warring neighbours

AB AAGE kya karna chahiye? (What should we do next?)” On May 23, 2001, at one of their periodic lunches, Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee asked the question of his Home Minister L K Advani and External Affairs and Defence Minister Jaswant Singh.

The question was in reference to Pakistan. It had been two years since the Kargil War and the main instigator, General Pervez Musharraf, was in power in Pakistan.

As Advani and Jaswant Singh, Vajpayee's long-time colleagues, expressed their support for engagement with Pakistan, a Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS) was called the same day. That very evening, an invitation went out to Musharraf.

Two months later, this invitation would result in the Agra Summit that lasted from July 14 to 16, 2001. The Summit marked a fleeting moment when it looked like the two countries would finally begin resolving differences across the negotiating table. But it ended in spectacular fashion, with Musharraf cutting short his visit, followed by one of the lowest points for India-Pakistan relations.

Now, 25 years later, with official engagement between the two countries at a complete halt, except for sporadic Track-II level talks, the Summit holds valuable lessons — on both the possibilities and futility of dialogue when the mistrust runs as deep as it does between the two nations.

The Summit, say those closely involved with the talks and others who watched it from the sidelines, was audacious in its ambition — and that, perhaps, proved to be its undoing. They also say that chances of another meeting of the kind are remote, given the “political risk” involved.

Ajay Bisaria, who was Vajpayee's private secretary at the time of the Agra Summit, and later served as India's High Commissioner to Pakistan, tells The Indian Express, “In hindsight, the error at Agra was clearly insufficient preparation. They should have prepped the Summit properly — sent teams back and forth. Instead, the approach was, ‘Let's see what the General does’. The failure was implicit in that.”

TCA Raghavan, then Director in Jaswant Singh's office who later served as India's envoy to Pakistan (June 2013-December 2015), agrees. “It was a missed opportunity, but it was also an underprepared summit. Not in terms of work put in... a lot of very great detail was gone into. But it was in an echo chamber.”

At the same time, says Raghavan, there is no doubting the significance of the Summit. “What strikes me is how big a step it was to invite Musharraf to India, the fact that a step like that could be taken then, in the aftermath of two seismic events in 1999 (the Kargil War and the Kandahar hijacking) is really quite extraordinary,” says Raghavan, the author of the book The People Next Door: The Curious History of India's Relations with Pakistan.

Vivek Katju, who, as Joint Secretary, MEA, in charge of Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iran, was a key official from the Indian side for the Agra Summit, says the talks illustrated the difference between the two leaders. “Prior to and during the Agra Summit, PM Vajpayee showed that he was a true statesman while Musharraf demonstrated all the obsessions of his institution,” he tells The Indian Express.

Katju, incidentally, played a key role during both the Kargil War and as a negotiator during the December 1999 IC-814 Kandahar hijacking.

The making of a Summit

In his book Anger Management: The Troubled Diplomatic Relationship Between India and Pakistan, Bisaria said the mention of talks at the time took even the top officials by surprise.

About the day the invite went out to Musharraf, he wrote, “When the discussion was brought to the Cabinet Committee on Security, a couple of MEA officers, Vivek Katju and Raminder Jassal, waited in my office... Jaswant Singh walked in and informed them of the ‘well thought out decision’ to invite Pakistan's dictator. ‘Good grief,’ said Jassal, reflecting the anti-Musharraf mood prevalent in the baffled foreign office... India had, in essence, reversed its decision on not engaging with Pakistan.”

Another reason it was seen as a big move by Vajpayee was that his earlier initiative, the Lahore bus yatra of 1999, had ended in the “betrayal” of the Kargil War. With the Kandahar hijacking following soon after in December 1999, the Vajpayee government was emphatic that it would not resume talks unless Pakistan stopped aiding and abetting cross-border terrorism.

The first hints of the BJP veteran's desire for peace had come first in November 2000 when, on the eve of Ramzan, he announced a unilateral six-month ceasefire on counter-insurgency operations in Jammu and Kashmir. On January 1, 2001, Vajpayee wrote about re-engaging with Pakistan in musings penned during a break in Kumarakom, Kerala. The PM's remark to his colleagues in May that year about what they should do next — “ab aage kya karna chahiye?” — came just before the six-month ceasefire was to end.

Recalling the conversation in his autobiography My Country, My Life, Advani wrote that in response to Vajpayee's question, he had said, “Atalji, why don't you invite the General to come to India for talks? It does not matter if your Lahore initiative failed. It was highly appreciated both at home and abroad. Similarly, your invitation to him will be welcomed as an act of statesmanship.”

Advani wrote that the venue initially proposed was Goa, but Vajpayee suggested Agra. On June 19, came the announcement — India would host Musharraf from July 14 to 16, including a welcome in Delhi, a retreat in Agra, and a visit to Ajmer Sharif.

A series of unilateral confidence-building announcements by India followed: 20 scholarships for Pakistani students at Indian technical institutions; month-long invites to Pakistani poets, academics, writers and artists; release of Pakistani prisoners; and a reduction in tariffs.

Before leaving for India, Musharraf, till then designated as Chief Executive of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, anointed himself “President”. When he landed in Delhi, he was met by then Indian President K R Narayanan at the Rashtrapati Bhavan.

Musharraf in Delhi

In Delhi, Musharraf's first halt along with wife Sehba was a visit to Naherwali Gali in Old Delhi on July 14. It was his family home till 1947, and Musharraf was four when they left it for Pakistan. The President next went to Raj Ghat and the Gandhi memorial nearby.

Advani, who met him at Rashtrapati Bhavan the same day, spoke to him about their common alma mater, St Patrick's High School in Karachi, and expressed the wish that people of the two countries with roots on either side should be able to go across the border easily.

At this point, Advani is said to have suggested that underworld don Dawood Ibrahim should be handed over to India. Musharraf's face “turned red”, Advani wrote, and he said: “Mr Advani, let me tell you emphatically that Dawood Ibrahim is not in Pakistan.” Advani said he then raised the issue of Indians being killed in “Pakistan-sponsored” terrorist attacks, and Musharraf replied by saying that “the core issue is the Kashmir dispute”.

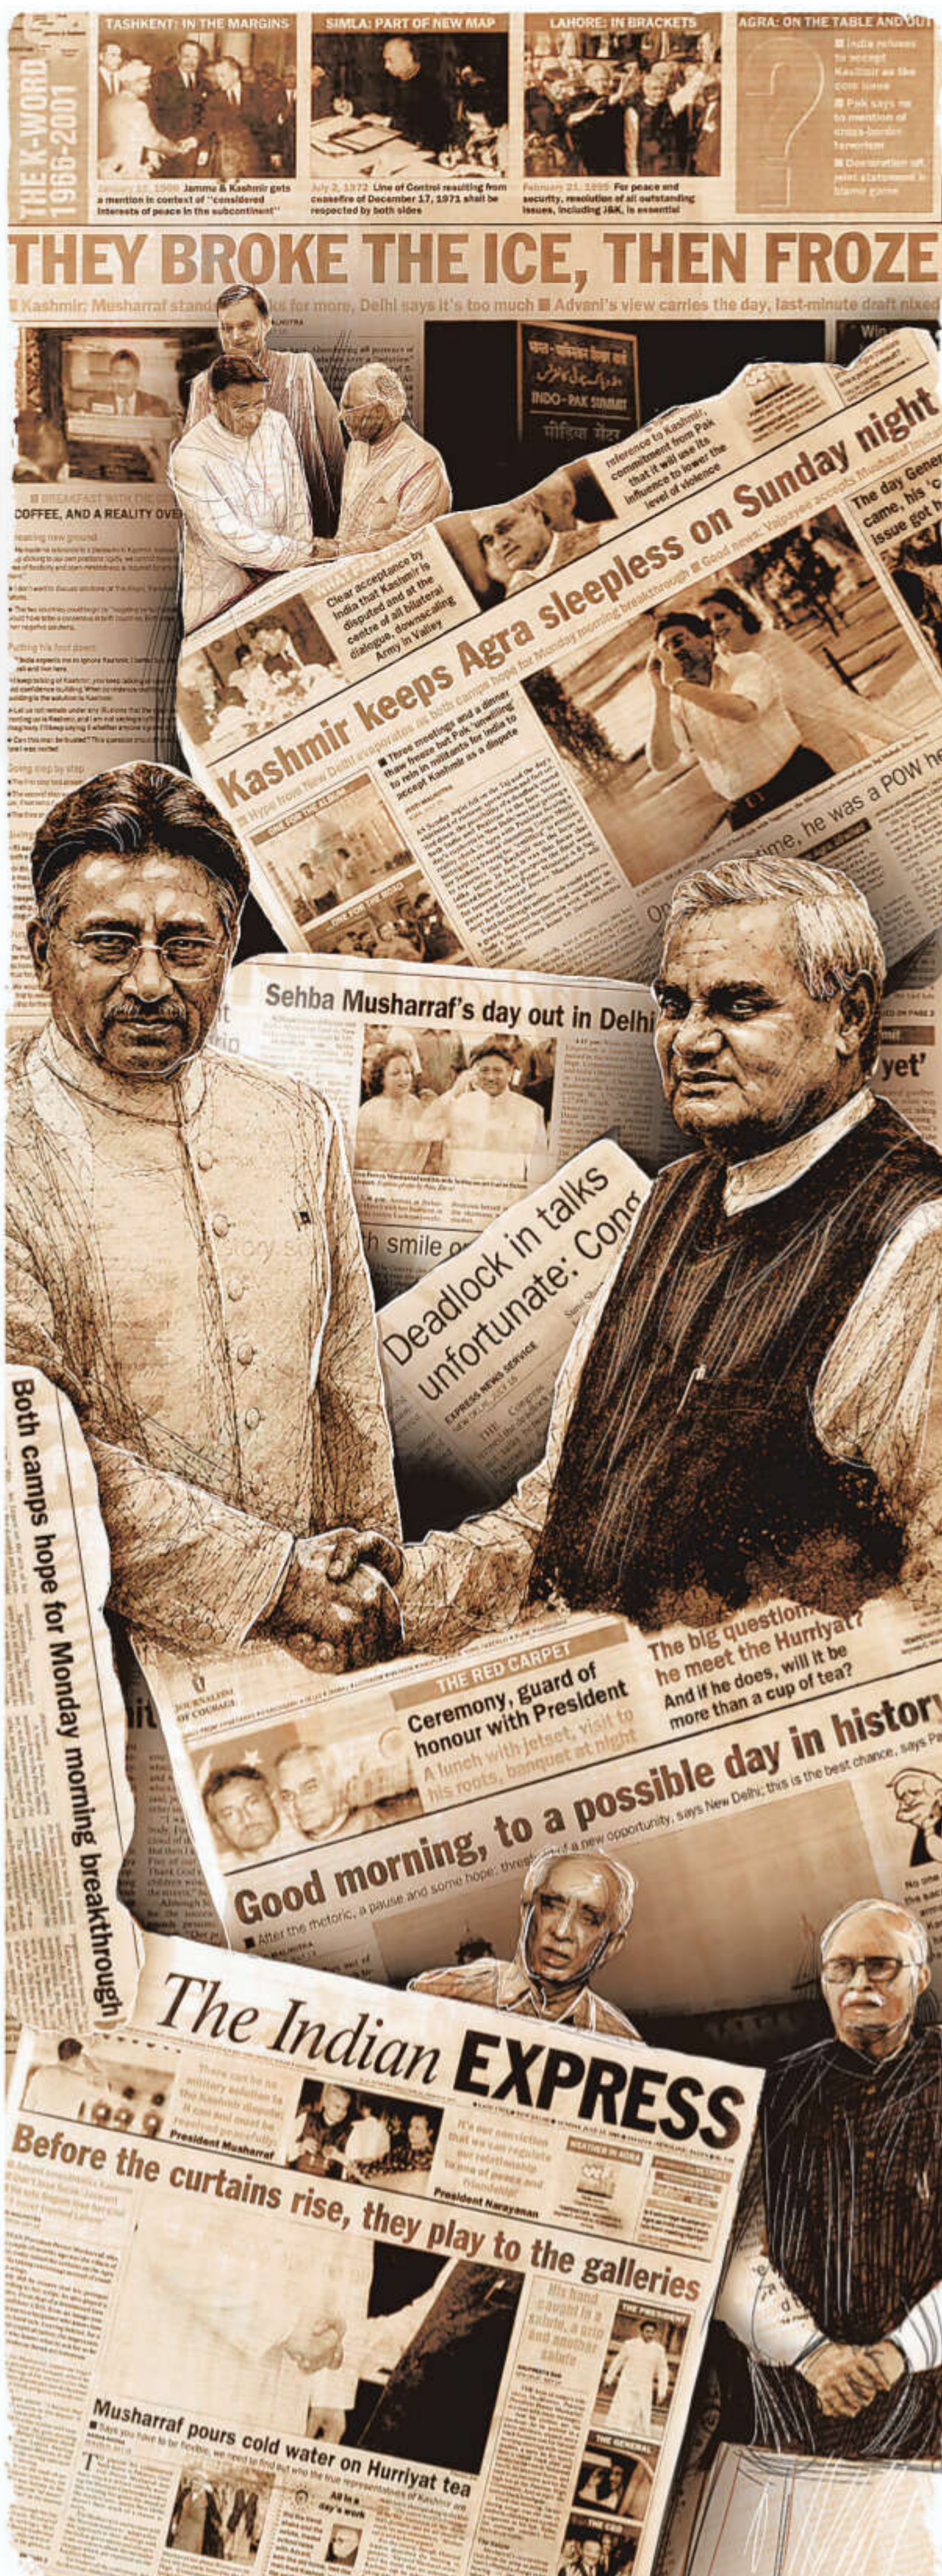

This was the first indication of what the General was thinking. Later, it would be on this issue that the talks would collapse.

In Agra, the Pakistani team stayed at the newly-built Oberoi Amarvilas Hotel, while Indians led by Vajpayee camped at Jaypee Palace, which was also the official venue for the talks. Vajpayee was accompanied by his entire CCS — apart from Advani and Jaswant Singh, Finance Minister Yashwant Sinha and Commerce Minister Muralosi Maran. Also present were National Security Advisor Brajesh Mishra, India's High Commissioner to Pakistan Vijay Nambiar, Katju in his capacity as Joint Secretary, and Information Minister Sushma Swaraj.

On July 15, as the bilateral meeting with Musharraf started, Vajpayee laid out India's goals in “precise” terms, wrote Advani — a detailed exchange of views, including on J&K and cross-border terrorism, the issue of terrorists taking refuge in gurdwaras in Pakistan, as well as the upkeep of Hindu temples and treatment of Hindu pilgrims in the country.

Indicating how Musharraf was playing to a larger audience, Bisaria recalled in his book that Musharraf launched into an exposition of his plans “to bring grass-roots democracy to Pakistan”. Bisaria wrote that he raised this with Vajpayee, particularly the irony of Pakistan's dictator explaining democracy to Indian leadership.

Jaswant Singh and Pakistani Foreign Minister Abdul Sattar were to frame a joint statement on July 15. Singh wrote in his book A Call to Honour that there was some Indian Express @ 4:00 a.m. <https://whatsapp.com/channel/0029Vn2VRb6RGJOKH6oBd0f> good-natured banter between them, and after some back and forth over a draft, where both made some changes, they decided to take it to their leaders.

Advani recalled in his book that when they discussed the issue on the evening of the 15th, “I noticed that there was no reference to cross-border terrorism (in the draft)... ‘This cannot be accepted’, I said. My view was unanimously endorsed by all present.” Advani said they also noticed the “absence of any reference to the Simla accord (1972) and the Lahore declaration (1999)”.

In his autobiography Relentless, Yashwant Sinha recalled how things went wrong. “Jaswant Singh had made some changes in his own hand to the typed copy of the draft and had given a photocopy of the amended draft to Sattar. Another copy was brought by him to Vajpayee's room where the rest of us had assembled,” Sinha wrote.

Advani, he wrote, pointed out the absence of cross-border terrorism in the draft and Sinha said there were no references to the Simla Agreement. “All this was pointed out to Jaswant Singh as politely as possible, with a request to include these in the draft,” Sinha wrote.

A miffed Jaswant Singh said this amounted to no-confidence in him and stormed out of the meeting. Sinha wrote that on Advani's request, he went to Jaswant Singh's room to mollify him, “only to find him in a very glum mood. I tried to reason with him by explaining that there was nothing personal in our approach; we had the highest respect for his abilities and the points we had made were merely suggestions. It was at this stage that the joint secretary in the MEA who oversaw the Pakistan desk, Vivek Katju, walked into the room with a piece of paper to show to Jaswant Singh”.

“Singh's mood remained sour and he told Katju that he was not interested in looking at the paper and that perhaps Katju could show it to someone else in the delegation... Being the quintessential civil servant, Katju replied, ‘Sir, you are my minister and I can only report to you.’ Jaswant Singh did cool down later but by then the negotiations with Pakistan were already in disarray,” Sinha wrote.

Advani wrote that “efforts continued at the official level to rework it (the draft) until 4.30 am on 16 July”.

The abrupt end

On July 16 morning, just ahead of a scheduled meeting with Vajpayee, Musharraf held a breakfast roundtable with editors of the Indian media, which was broadcast with a brief delay. Jaswant Singh wrote in his book that the President came across as “too belligerent”.

Bisaria wrote that they were taken aback. “Musharraf had let loose his hawkish position on Kashmir and equated terrorists with freedom fighters... NSA Brajesh Mishra and I watched the proceedings with dismay.”

Bisaria said they quickly typed out a note to brief the PM on what Musharraf had just said. “My arrival interrupted the conversation as both leaders looked up. Musharraf had been talking and Vajpayee was listening, apparently with great interest. I handed over the paper to the boss... After I left the room, Vajpayee looked at the paper and then read out from it to Musharraf, saying edgily that his behaviour was not helping the talks... I was playfully accused by some colleagues of torpedoing the Agra initiative.”

In his book, Jaswant Singh wrote, “General Musharraf seemed not to understand the debilitating impact Kargil had had on the atmospherics and also not grasp the essence of what Prime Minister Vajpayee had offered — a new beginning.”

Some last-minute efforts were still made. “Musharraf asked for a last meeting with Vajpayee to see if he could save the failing Summit. To Vajpayee, this move had echoes of Bhutto's gambit in Simla in 1972, when he asked for a last call on Indira Gandhi, at a time when the Simla agreement had been deadlocked,” Bisaria wrote.

Musharraf left for Islamabad, without visiting Ajmer Sharif. Jaswant Singh, asked if the Indian government prevented him from visiting the shrine, replied: “Meri kya aukaat ki main unhe Garib Nawaaz ke paas jaane se roku (Who am I to stop the Musharrafs from visiting the Dargah)?”

In his version of what transpired, Musharraf wrote in his autobiography In The Line of Fire, published in September 2006, “I met Prime Minister Vajpayee at about 11 o'clock at night in an extremely somber mood. I told him bluntly that there seemed to be someone above the two of us who had the power to overrule us. I also said that both of us had been humiliated. He just sat there, speechless.”

Advani rejected this as an “outrageous claim” in his book.

Bisaria tells The Indian Express that for Vajpayee, the Agra Summit “was a necessary step towards closure on Kargil”. “The hope at Agra was to reach that closure. The Summit was also necessary for Vajpayee and his team to understand the Pakistani General and his proclivities... Watching it fail, and persisting, was critical to Vajpayee reaching that closure in January 2004, which bought us a few years of peace, certainly for the next three years... In that sense, the peace he hoped to achieve at Agra did eventually materialise; Agra itself was simply too soon.”

In January 2004, Vajpayee and Musharraf met in Islamabad during the SAARC Summit and issued a historic joint press statement with an assurance that no Pakistani territory would be used to support terrorism in India.

25 years later...

PM Modi's first two years in power were marked by overtures towards Pakistan, including the invitation to then PM Nawaz Sharif for his swearing-in in 2014, and his surprise visit to Lahore in December 2015. However, with successive terrorist attacks, in Pathankot, Uri, Pulwama and Pahalgalam, the government has hardened its line.

In recent weeks and months, there has been some engagement at the Track-II level and RSS leaders have spoken about the need for an engagement.

On whether talks can happen between India and Pakistan now, Raghavan says, “It doesn't seem very likely, but I always say that with India-Pakistan, you cannot predict because things never follow a linear course. Anything can happen any time.”

However, he adds, he does not give much credence to the Track-II talks. “The issues are not people-to-people. The issues are intergovernmental... At a common sense level, obviously everyone will say that there has to be engagement.”

Bisaria, who was India's envoy to Pakistan during the Pulwama terror attack and the Balakot surgical strike in February 2019, and was withdrawn after the abrogation of Art 370 in August 2019, adds that climbing back will take a long time. “The longer we go without spectacular terrorism of the Pulwama-Pahalgalam level, the greater the chances of some reconciliation. Right now, the trust level is so low that post-Sindoor, the feeling was that the next attack was coming very soon.”

However, Bisaria says he “certainly advocates a line of communication with the Pakistan Army, covert or overt, to test whether there is a reasonable guarantee, and a reasonable appetite on the other side, for rapprochement”.

Asked about the possibility of another Summit like Agra, Bisaria says: “The Indian political leadership now sees the political cost of a peace initiative as too high. The examples cited are Vajpayee in 1999 repaid with Kargil; Vajpayee again engaging Musharraf at Agra in 2001 and still not succeeding; Manmohan Singh seeing the cost in the 2008 Mumbai terror attack and never risking a Pakistan visit; and Modi paying the price for the 2015 Lahore visit with the Pathankot attack. So politically, it appears too risky — the fear of being caught in a ruse yet again.”

If a Summit happens now, Bisaria says, “it will happen only with a sufficient guarantee — direct or indirect, overt or covert — that this time it is for real: that Pakistan wants a genuine conversation and no one will sabotage it with an attack.”

An Epic Spectacle

Shalini Langer

ALL THE ado about Homeric characters saying “Mom”, “Dad” and “F..k” can be laid to rest. Those are but minor updates to the late 8th or early 7th century BC epic The Odyssey (emerging from oral traditions going back even further) by writer-director Christopher Nolan. In the film, the gods are largely inconsequential (barring a scowling, floating in-and-out Athena), real heroes are decided by free will, women are firmly — and sometimes fiercely — feminist, and the shifty, cunning Odysseus of the epic is a man defined almost entirely by guilt that befits a quintessential Nolan lead.

That said, the latest film by the auteur is nothing but impressive. We know about the shot-entirely-in-IMAX ambition, and the massive $250 million budget. However, Nolan employs it in the service of a story that never grows old, and has never seemed as modern, in both its pursuit of home and the transience of it. The parallel, weaving narratives of the epic, comprising 24 poems in all, suit him well, and the smoothness with which he moves between them are a credit to Nolan's craft and commitment.

A co-screenwriter on the film, Nolan has cited Emily Wilson's adaptation of The Odyssey — the first by a woman, and often contested — as his inspiration. That is a hint of his intentions but, on screen, they are far from the entirety of the film.

Instead, like the epic intends, you are swept up by the scale of Odysseus's journey, and that of his men, the sea that tosses them around, the sky that rains down, the boat that creaks and breaks under them, the monsters that challenge them, the ravages that war wrought, and the price that victory entails.

In Matt Damon, Nolan has the kind of beefy, grizzly, remorseful and noble action star that his Odyssey needs. He is believable, both cutting down men and weeping over them, bonding and scheming, and growing old over 10 long years on the sea after winning the Trojan War. The epic's Odysseus is not averse to lying and sleeping around for his ultimate goal, which is to reach home. Damon has shown he is capable of both nobility and playing shifty, sexy characters, and one wishes Nolan had trusted him with that.

Instead, Odysseus's encounters in the film with both Calypso (Charlize Theron) and Circe (Samantha Morton) are entirely devoid of sex, and certainly of any suggestion that one reason our hero forgets his way is that he is having too much pleasure in the company of the two enchantresses.

The film instead lends a purpose to the actions of both Calypso and Circe, which go beyond bedding Odysseus, with Morton absolutely stealing the show as a witch who turns his men into pigs because that is their “true nature”. Nolan and cinematographer Hoyte van Hoytema lend the scenes with Circe a terrifying yet tragic quality that is mesmerising. Theron, in contrast, comes across as an angelically dressed therapist who could have stepped out of — or rather, stepped right into — the TV series, The White Lotus. And that's not just because she keeps making Odysseus eat lotus to keep his mind reassuringly numb.

Other women too get a Nolan rewrite, with Penelope (an efficient Anne Hathaway) giving a particularly savage sermon on how Ithaca's throne is still considered “empty”, though she has been in charge for 20 years since her husband Odysseus left. And how now, she must quiescently cede control to Telemachus (Tom Holland), because “all my knowledge and experience are nothing compared to the bristles on your face.”

Telemachus has nothing to say in return, and neither does Holland. His charm dulled down, the actor is bland even as the film mounts his journey to find whether father Odysseus is alive or not as a parallel to the latter's.

Lupita Nyong'o does what she can do with the little screen time she has playing both Helen and her twin sister Clytemnestra, who murders her husband Agamemnon, after he has returned from the Trojan War. Despite all the brouhaha about Elliot Page's casting, he has little to do either.

Robert Pattinson as Antinous, one of the dozens of suitors waiting to take Odysseus's place and stalking Penelope, has to leer and play oily and slimy. And he does that well.

However, more than any other, this is, above all, a Nolan film; and while he does his tinkering with the spirit of Homer's epic, he knows better than to tamper with the spectacle of it. Cyclops will seize your heart, the chaos of his cave as bleating sheep and frightened men are towered by the one-eyed monster conveying the frenzy of fright. Circe will make you think twice before accepting meals from a stranger. Poseidon (though present here only in various mentions of him) will weigh on you the next time you are at sea. And the horse conjured by Odysseus that ultimately won his side the Trojan War, standing half-submerged at sea in haunting loneliness before being hauled into the walls of Troy, will not be easily forgotten.

Few before now have considered the men who hid in that horse for days before the plan succeeded, and what it would have meant being packed in with nowhere to relieve themselves but where they lay. Nolan goes into that detail.

As also into the fact that the top of their armour grazing their necks meant warriors probably constantly pulled the same away — like actors in the film do. It may not be Homeric, but it's a Nolan home run.

Much Gore, Still a Bore

HEADS ARE severed and mutilated yet again in the latest Evil Dead installment, which understands, at the very least, that any inheritor of the 1981 cult classic by Sam Raimi must strive to unleash a torrent of shamelessly nasty thrills. The blood feast, Evil Dead: The Book of Eli, is the second in a series of fresh reboots intended to give promising early-career horror directors a shot at flexing their meanest muscles. Its story we can already guess, so the inventive orchestration of slicing and stabbing is essential here — though the director Sébastien Vanicek delivers only in moments and bursts.

Written by Vanicek and Florent Bernard, the film begins at a lake where a dudes' fishing trip unearths a demonic spirit whose weapon of choice is heat. Boiling, searing and burning its way through the plot, the entity causes a fiery car crash that drops us directly into the central drama involving Alice (Souheila Yacoub), the widow of crash victim, Will (George Pullar) and Will's surly parents, Susan (Tandi Wright) and Edgar (Erroll Shand). Will's funeral occasions a laughably tense family reunion at a creaky colonial mansion, where the evil spirit — via fitful camerawork that judders its way around multiple floors and cluttered rooms — swiftly takes possession of the family members and pits them against their living counterparts.

Evil Dead acolytes will know better than to stack Evil Dead: The Book of Eli against the original — a DIY marvel from what feels like a long, lost era of independent filmmaking — but the previous installment, Evil Dead: Rise, is fair game. Against Lee Cronin's finely calibrated joyride, Vanicek's version, for all the tricks up its sleeve, never feels in control of its chaos. Individual face-offs in which the violence is contained in cramped quarters — such as the inside of a car and a bathroom — stand out, whereas more sprawling set pieces often feel like we are in a haunted house playing Whac-a-Mole.

In any case, the film's vibes are convincingly, impressively rotten to match its grim ideas about the false promises of the nuclear family, as in a feel-bad dinner scene nodding to The Texas Chain Saw Massacre. Alice, who is French, has always felt like an outsider in Will's family, and fuzzy flashbacks to unhappy scenes from their marriage reveal the ambivalence of her mourning. These emotional detours aren't particularly convincing; Vanicek and Bernard's attempts to deepen Alice's inner struggles are more distracting than meaningful.

On the other hand, the duo's weird and cruel sense of humour meshes nicely with the series' mandate of blasphemy. Rounding out the crew of potential victims is Will's soft-spoken brother, Joseph (Hunter Doohan); Joseph's girlfriend, Thya (Luciane Buchanan); and his grandma, Polly (Maude Davey), whose electric stair lift and dementia are weaponised to induce nervous laughter in some of the film's darkest bits.

Vanicek, a French director who broke out in 2023 with his chiller Infested, about deadly spiders that overrun a high-rise in the Parisian suburbs, winks to his viewers back home with choice needle drops and sneaker styles. But between the references to Tobe Hooper and The Terminator, the film also pays homage to a generation of American horror hits that made the United States — its dreams, houses, and, yes, people — nightmare fuel for the rest of the world.

A SHAJI Kailas film has always meant a larger-than-life hero, a villain with a powerful backstory, heavy dialogues delivered with chest-thumping conviction and impressive action sequences. Varavu, his latest, is an attempt to prove his old grammar still works. It does, but only in parts.

It is set in the tea plantation country around Kerala's Munnar, Marayoor and Kanchalloor, where estate politics are not just business but instruments of generational power. At the centre of it is Joju George's Paulson — a man whose family was torn apart decades ago by the local land-owning cartel, led by Medayil Kochettan (Murali Gopy). Paulson was displaced as a child and left to build himself up from nothing. He did. And now he is back.

This story has been told by Shaji Kailas before in different forms and the first half is not half bad. The problem is that patience, at 143 minutes, starts wearing thin. The Malayalam-language film takes its time getting to the point, and not all of it is well spent. The subplots are unnecessary and slow the film down. Atmospheric scenes are repetitive and the action sequences disjointed. The screenplay needed a tighter edit.

Joju George plays Paulson with a quiet restraint of a man who does not need to raise his voice to make people uncomfortable. The film's other major asset is Murali Gopy. There is a depth to his arc and a logic to his cruelty that makes the central conflict more than just good versus evil.

S Saravanan's cinematography renders the film a misty, claustrophobic beauty that those familiar with the hill country will know. Sabu Ram's art direction grounds the film in its setting with convincing detail.

If you walk in wanting a mass thriller with strong action and a slow-burn revenge arc, Varavu fumbles here and there, but delivers. However, if you walk in expecting the kind of storytelling economy that the best of contemporary Malayalam cinema has taught audiences to expect, you will feel the extra minutes. Joju George deserved a film that matched his performance beat for beat. Varavu gets close but misses the mark.

WHEN THE first season of Heartstopper released in April 2022 — a period that in pop-culture parlance can be referred to as pre-Heated Rivalry era — it offered a sensitive, albeit sensitised, look at the life and longings of teen LGBTQ+ students in a British high school. The coming-of-age romantic drama series, created and written by Alice Oseman, based on her webcomic and graphic novel series by the same name, was initially told from the point of view of Charlie (Joe Locke). After three seasons, the just-released movie focuses on Charlie and his boyfriend Nick (Kit Connor) as well as on the big questions regarding what the future holds for them as they step into adulthood.

In fact, the movie seems more like a feature-length finale of their stories as well as that of their friends, than a typical movie. Doubling as a remarkable send-off for the Heartstopper story, the film not only explores the emotional upheavals and insecurities most teenagers go through but also gives its fans a reason to smile. The movie retains the signature wholesomeness of the series. Instead of dwelling on the trauma that most queer youngsters go through, it infuses the narrative with hope.

Quite literally, falling in love has been depicted as an exhilarating butterflies-inducing emotion, with the help of graphics

Since the first season, the series has increasingly gravitated towards shining the spotlight on mental health. The series has earlier talked about Charlie being bullied and shamed for his sexuality as well as his struggle with anorexia. Taking a step forward, Charlie checks into a special mental health facility to get better in Heartstopper Forever and continues with his therapy even after he rejoins school. Prior to that, he has a conversation with his parents about his condition. Subsequently, the film flips the nar-

THE SERIES follows life-long best friends Debbie (Octavia Spencer) and Judith (Hannah Waddingham), whose friendship is upended when Debbie discovers that Judith has secretly been working as an international assassin. relative to show how Nick has been struggling with his anxiety and the impact of being raised by a single parent.

Heartstopper Forever follows their story at a time when Nick must decide which university he would join while Charlie comes of age, contesting for the position of the head boy at school, and making a promise to the students that he is going to create a safe space for them. In their relationship too, a more confident Charlie is in charge more often. All through this, however, the fear that teen romances don't really survive into adulthood looms large. They struggle to figure out if theirs is going to be a true happily-ever-after story.

The film does not devote as much time to other couples as it did in the series. Elle (Yasmin Finney) and Tao (William Gao) go through an on-again and off-again relationship. As Elle is determined about moving to Berlin and becoming an artist, their love for each other is put to test but does not diminish.

Ultimately, the film is a celebration of all the young queer characters, who have come to form a strong, supportive community that helps each one of them embrace their identities and choices.

Is Messi's game fundamentally Spanish or Argentinian? It's both, as Spanish as Spain and as Argentinian as Argentina could be. He blends the freedom and fight of the Argentina game and the refined rigour of the Spanish school.

The wits are founded in Spain: the spatial awareness, how to make space, harness it, and find space that others don't. As is the minimalism of his movements, the lack of flourishes. Maybe, he thinks like a Spaniard and plays like an Argentine.

Argentina maestro sculpted in Spain

Sandip G
New Jersey, July 17

ANDRÉS INIESTA knows Lionel Messi. He knows Messi more than most. He was his source of goals, his best friend, and the man he turned to when he needed a brotherly hug. He knew his moments with telepathic intuition. They were comrades in 489 games. Yet, one afternoon in Buenos Aires, two months after Spain were crowned world champions and the universe in awe of their style, Messi showed little mercy to Iniesta, the goalscorer in the final against the Netherlands, or his other Barcelona friends.

Just eight minutes had passed when they came up against each other: Messi striding upfield, Iniesta crouched like a sumo wrestler to stop him. Messi dropped his shoulder, shifted his body to the left, but slithered to his right, leaving Iniesta still like a statue.

When he turned back, he saw Messi slipping away from three markers, sliding into a pocket of space no one had spotted until it was too late, and lobbing the ball over goalkeeper Pepe Reina. The game ended with Argentina battering Spain 4-1, a near full-strength Spain. It was the last time Messi confronted Spain, the country where he spent most of his years from 13 to 34, the La Masia Academy of Barcelona that moulded and nurtured his ideas and ideals of football, the club that gave him an identity, where he made friends and bonds of a lifetime. Barcelona and Messi are as inseparable as Argentina and Messi.

Years later, Iniesta recalled that night to Canal television: "Thank god, he is my teammate, I don't want to suffer such embarrassment. I can sympathise with others."

Manager Vicente del Bosque said jokingly in the press: "I wish he played for us. He could have been a world champion, yeah, a European winner." But Messi's loyalties were clear. In his heart was always Argentina, even though for much of his career, until he lifted the World Cup, he had to show his Argentinianism every time he put on the jersey.

And it's not that Spain didn't try to coax him away in his early years at Barcelona, far away from the gaze of Argentina's youth scouts and consciousness.

Just months after Messi joined La Masia, youth coach Alex Garcia wondered why Argentina were not showing enthusiasm in tracking Messi. He decided to call then Spain's youth coach Ginés Meléndez. "There's a kid here, an Argentine, but they (Argentina) don't call him up. Maybe there's a possibility he might want to play for Spain."

Most of Messi's teammates were part of the youth squads, the scouts constantly monitoring them. No one checked on Messi. His blossoming genius was hidden in his country. Meléndez dropped by, watched him and excitedly instructed him: "Convince him, his parents, or maybe agents. He is the future." Meléndez later told ESPN Spain in a documentary: "All I was missing was Leo. I imagined him with that team. I imagined my national team being completely invincible."

The club presumed that the mission would be straightforward. For, Messi and his family were indebted to Barcelona. They found a job for his father and paid him around $70,000 annually; they paid $1,000 a month for his hormone injections, an impediment for several Argentinian clubs to sign him. But they had to convince him first, because the ties were cordial between the two federations. Garcia had a way with his students. He asked him playfully: "You mates are playing for their country. Wouldn't you like to play for Spain so you don't end up here all alone when everyone's away?"

Messi was indeed lonely. He missed his home and friends when they were in national camp. "At the start, the truth is that it was tough, it was hard. My brothers had gone to Argentina, my sister's adaptation was the toughest of all, she was the smallest and it was hard for them, with school and everything. They decided that my mother would go to Argentina with her. I was alone."

But his mind, even at 13, was firm. He would only play for Argentina. "There were informal contacts to see if I wanted to play for Spain, but I always said that I wanted to play for Argentina and I only feel these colours," he wrote in La Nación.

The Barcelona coaches took a different route: to try through his agent Horacio Gaggioli. He played along diplomatically. "We have to talk to his family." Deep inside, though, he didn't want Messi to slip away from Argentina's net. He spoke to coaches, but nothing concrete manifested.

But a year later, he heard that Argentina coach Marcelo Bielsa and his assistant Claudio Vivas were in Spain to watch the senior players. Gaggioli sniffed an opportunity and asked Messi's father to give him a VHS tape of Messi's skills he had videographed.

Through his sources, he ferried it to Bielsa and Vivas. But they were so busy that they didn't watch it immediately.

It took a prompting from Messi's academy for Vivas to watch it. The U-17 squads of both teams were staying in the same hotel for the World Cup. After Spain beat Argentina, the latter's youth coach Hugo Toccalli met the Spaniards to congratulate them. Fabregas told a Marca reporter: "You lost because you didn't play your best". Intrigued, he asked: "Who?" "Lionel Messi".

Then the VHS tape struck him, and he showed it to Bielsa. The legendary coach's first response: "But don't play it at fast speed, play it to me normally." The video was at normal speed, only that Messi was quick.

What followed was a manic run to find his parents. The task fell on national team manager Omar Souto. Sensing the urgency in Toccalli's tone, he straightaway went to a payphone booth, and called everyone with a Messi surname. He didn't even know his first name. After an hour and burning hundreds of pesos, he connected to his grandmother. "I called his grandmother. Then his uncle. Then, finally, Jorge [Messi] in Spain. 'He's Lionel,' Jorge told me, 'And he's been waiting for Argentina to call.'"

In days, the AFA sent a fax to Barcelona requesting them to release him for national duty, but funnily with a wrong spelling "LEONEL MECCI." A year later, he made his youth debut against Paraguay. When Souto died in 2025, Messi penned a touching tribute: "You were always present, and you were the person who paved the way for the AFA to spot me." It's a quirk of history: Argentina almost let him go. The heart, Messi insists, was always here. But hearts can be fickle.

Is Messi's game fundamentally Spanish or Argentinian? It's both, as Spanish as Spain and as Argentinian as Argentina could be. He blends the freedom and fight of the Argentina game and the refined rigour of the Spanish school. The magic of his feet is from Argentina, the feet dance to an indecipherable tune.

It's more tango than sardana. He cares for it like a father would an infant. Watch him in set pieces, he doesn't perceive it as an inanimate instrument of fame. It's his love.

The wits are founded in Spain: the spatial awareness, how to make space, harness it, and find space that others don't. As is the minimalism of his movements, the lack of flourishes. Maybe, he thinks like a Spaniard and plays like an Argentine. He dwells on the outer reaches of both schools, and lays a bridge between two supposedly antithetical sporting tenets. One that glorifies the height of individual expression, and one that emphasises collectivism and ideology above everything else.

Messi has a rogue spirit like Maradona. In a different era, the Hand of God could have been his. In the last two World Cups, he has at times been nasty on the field, picking up fights with referees and instigating rivals. But unlike Maradona, he is largely reclusive off the field.

In the final, Spain could find shades of themselves in their chief nemesis, just as Argentina could sense Spanish riffs in their talisman. Messi belongs to both.

Smog engulfs New York-New Jersey ahead of final

RESIDENTS OF New York and New Jersey, along with thousands of travelling fans, are grappling with growing health concerns just days before the World Cup final.

Officials have issued an air quality alert, warning of hazardous conditions across the region.

The sudden deterioration in air quality has been traced to smoke drifting from wildfires raging across Canada, which has blanketed the skies over a vast stretch of the United States, from the Midwest to the Northeast. According to a Reuters report, thick smoke from hundreds of fires has prompted authorities to urge residents to stay indoors wherever possible and avoid the polluted air.

The situation took a turn for the worse just as Spain arrived in New Jersey on Wednesday night, a day after their semifinal victory over France in Texas, as per a BBC report. Spain trained outdoors on Thursday and appeared largely unfazed by the conditions. The team has not issued any statement expressing concern. Argentina, meanwhile, remained in Georgia following their semifinal win over England and were scheduled to begin training in New Jersey later, the BBC added.

In New York, where the sky was tinged with an orange haze and the air smelled acrid, local officials urged residents to limit their outdoor time. "Today is expected to be the worst day of this event," New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani said at a gathering on Thursday.

"At 'unhealthy' levels, everyone – not just people with asthma or heart conditions, not just older adults – everyone may feel health effects." ENS

Final venue's 'dry' grass under the scanner

FOR THE first time in history, the reigning European and Copa America winners are going up against each other in a World Cup final. Among all the interesting subplots within the summit clash lies an unlikely one – the very grass on which the ball will roll for at least 90 minutes on Sunday. Brazil and Real Madrid superstar Vinicius Junior called it dry. France midfielder Adrian Rabiot even wondered if one could label it a "pitch". Rabiot's coach Didier Deschamps certainly thought the grass at the MetLife Stadium was 'special' and 'different'.

Having kept aside the venue for the last fortnight, FIFA's pitch development and maintenance unit is hoping that the grass will not affect the dynamics. Alan Ferguson, who is overseeing pitch development for FIFA, told the Athletic that the concerns with the pitch were due to a calculated punt the organisers had taken in prioritising "warm-season" grass chosen over a "cooler-season" pitch. Halftime to stretch beyond 15 minutes

THE HALFTIME interval in World Cup final between Spain and Argentina is set to last more than 15 minutes because of the installation required for the tournament's first halftime entertainment show, broadcasting sources said on Friday. The installation of the stage for the 11-minute show is expected to take around seven minutes, the sources said, although it was unclear how long it would then take to dismantle the equipment and clear the pitch before the second half could begin. FIFA's World Cup regulations state that matches are played in accordance with the Laws of the Game set by the International Football Association Board, which say players are entitled to a halftime interval "not exceeding 15 minutes".

The tournament regulations themselves, however, say players are entitled to a "15-minute interval" at halftime, without repeating the IFAB wording that the break cannot exceed that duration. REUTERS

Messi vs Spain: Argentina's hero against a team that doesn't believe in heroes

Shuvaditya Bose
New Delhi, July 17

AS LAUTARO Martinez sprinted towards the corner flag to celebrate his 92nd-minute winner against England, he was embraced by none. Where did the Argentines vanish?

They were surrounding the man who supplied the cross instead. Lionel Messi. Their captain. Their compass. Their god among mortals.

The players gravitated towards the same figure again after the full-time whistle, this time hoisting Messi onto their shoulders as the stadium sang: "Que de la mano, de Leo Messi, todos la vuelta vamos a dar." ("Hand in hand with Leo Messi, we're all going to celebrate the victory.")

The dressing room echoed the sentiment. "Por la última de Leo, Argentina, quiero verte bicampeón." (For Leo's last one, Argentina, I want to see you become a two-time champion)

The players reinforced the chant in words.

Alexis Mac Allister wants to be a world champion again – not for his own happiness, but Messi's. "Making Leo feel happy is the most important thing."

Lisandro Martinez is overwhelmed not by the prospect of another world title, but by sharing a dressing room with him. "I feel immensely emotional that he is here with us, day in and day out, and at the fact that he is Argentine. There are no words to explain this feeling. We can simply enjoy him."

Lionel Scaloni does not spend his time arguing that Argentina are the world's best team, or that he is its finest coach. Instead, he makes the case for his captain. "Leo is the best player in history. What more does he need to do to prove that he is?"

Spain coach Luis de la Fuente: "We are a team with a capital T." AP

Eight goals, four assists, 41 crosses, 154 attempted linebreaks, 25 chances created – he leads every metric for the defending champions. Clearly, a one-man army.

Yet those numbers conceal something just as remarkable.

Messi has run less than any other outfield player at this World Cup – not because age has finally caught him, but because his teammates have chosen to carry the burden instead. Every yard he conserves is covered by someone else.

Why? Mac Allister's answer is simple. "It is obvious. Everyone in this team is ready to give everything for Leo. Because he does his own things, and we are grateful for what he does." Those 'own things' are irreplaceable. Only Messi could have bent in the cross for Martinez's winner against England. Only Messi could have rescued Argentina against Egypt or curled home that free-kick against Jordan.

His team knows there is only one Messi. There is only one hero in Argentina. But for their hero to win the World Cup, they must beat a team that does not believe in one. Spain.

● ● ●

La Roja could easily have elevated a hero of their own. They have the Ballon d'Or winner in Rodri. Yet, when asked if he would trade that honour for a World Cup, he answered without skipping a beat: "Without a doubt. Winning with your country is the most special thing there can be. Currently, the most important title I have won is the Euro, not the Ballon d'Or. I understand football collectively."

Luis de la Fuente has preached the same doctrine throughout his tenure. "We are the best team in the world," he said after beating France.

Not the team with the best player in Rodri, or the best prodigy in Lamine Yamal. Simply, the best team.

Answering the most important aspect of his team, he had said, "Our strength lies in our unity. We are a team, with a capital T. We have built this concept of family, and it is deeply ingrained. For us, the sense of being a group is the most important." Spain's numbers reflect that creed. Messi tops almost every attacking category for Argentina. Spain's leaders are scattered across the squad: Mikel Oyarzabal in goals, Dani Olmo and Marc Cucurella in assists, Alex Baena in crosses, Aymeric Laporte in line breaks, Lamine Yamal in dribbles.

At East Rutherford on Sunday, an epic clash awaits. One team wants to conquer the world for its hero. The other believes it does not need one to be the best.

Only one will win.

Firouzja edges world champ Gukesh in Rd 2 nail-biter

D Gukesh lost to Alireza Firouzja at Chennai Grand Masters. CGM

Amit Kamath Chennai, July 17

ALIREZA FIROUZJA ambled out of the playing hall like he had stepped out for a casual walk in the evening. His laid-back demeanour hid the fact that he had just defeated Gukesh D on the world champion's home soil in a nail-biting 69-move brawl in the second round of the Chennai Grand Masters tournament. Following his first-round victory over Praneish, Firouzja has the sole lead in one of the strongest classical tournament fields ever assembled in India.

Error-prone game

It was a game riddled with errors from both players as the evaluation bar swung like a pendulum. Firouzja had a slight edge by move 27, then made what the engine dubbed as an inaccuracy on the next move. One move later, Gukesh erred. Advantage Firouzja. By the 31st move, Gukesh was in a lost position and had just over a minute on his clock. His rival had two.

Gukesh, whose forte is his calculation skills, is not known for his prowess in low times. Firouzja is a beast when the time is low. But the 20-year-old is a patron of lost causes. He fought himself out of the hole.

On move 33, Firouzja blundered. The evaluation bar fell to the centre. It was anyone's game now. Tension enveloped the board, evident by how Gukesh's right foot was quaking. Over the table, even Firouzja was having to pause and think.

More blunders from both players followed. The evaluation bar was like a teenager jumping rope. By the 39th move, Gukesh was down a pawn, a disadvantage that he carried into the endgame until he eventually surrendered. But before that resignation came a dance of the knights, with both players using their sole horse on the board to attack and defend at the same time.

By the 69th move, Gukesh gave up.

The defeat meant that Gukesh was at the bottom of the eight-player standing with half a point along with Praneish. Between Firouzja and Gukesh lies the rest of the field with one point apiece.

A World Cup final is a stage fit for superstars of the game, but there are several individuals who lurk in the shadows and make telling contributions. Argentina's Enzo Fernandez and Spain's Fabian Ruiz are two vital components that keep their teams' engine rooms purring.

Ruiz: Midfield dynamo with the stealth of a cat

Fabian Ruiz got his first goal in the quarter-final against Belgium and finished the semi-final against France strongly. AP

Sandip G Atlanta, July 17

THE FIRST touch of Kylian Mbappe in the semifinal match against France was exquisite. Hetwisted his body sideways so that he could take the ball on his stride and waltz away. He braked, because there was an intruder, Fabian Ruiz. He popped up from nowhere and cajoled the ball from the Frenchman. He was not meant to be there, but that was where he was, in unmanned space snuffing out the danger.

The next second, just like he appeared, he disappeared to the vast expanses of the arena, to an recognisable shimmering red shirt. It's how Fabian — he tells journalists to put just his first name in print — wants the world to see him. In the moment he chooses to.

Or rather it's how the action unfolds. Fabian was a few yards behind Adrien Rabiot when he wrestled the ball from Lamine Yamal. But his binocular eyes noticed that Pedro Porro was static down the right flank and Mbappe would be running into space. It's this vision, and processing ability to read the situation that makes him the manager's favourite for dismantling the original favourites.

The more classical option for Luis de la Fuente was Pedri. The Barcelona midfielder can conjure breathtaking passes, defence-splitting crosses and navigate through tight spaces with an alley cat's stealth. But against France — the Belgium game where Fabian displaced Pedri in the starting eleven seemed like a rehearsal — the manager needed a more dynamic presence, someone who could orchestrate fast, one-touch, grab-and-go passing passages, where the players glided like piranhas on water. He is like a double agent, prowling in the shadows, laying snares in clandestine.

At the heart of it was Fabian, yet he would be traceless in highlight reels, even extended ones. He mans the left side of the midfield, either on the left of Rodri in a double pivot or ahead of him, in the No. 8 role. From there, he has typically three preferred routes. Fizz upfront into a ten's role, making late runs into the box to offer goal-scoring threat and often scoring goals, as he did against Belgium with a cracker.

Wanderto the left, letting the winger Alex Baena drift in, and thread passes down the line. Sometimes, he even drops back for the underlapping runs of left-back Marc Cucurella. He punches the balls in between the lines to teammates higher up the pitch.

Under the cloak of invisibility he goes unappreciated. In the European Championship, he was as influential as Rodri was, but in a different way. He racked two goals and as many assists; maintained a passing precision of 88 percent, made 24 successful tackles and made a tournament high of 21 possession recoveries.

In largely cameo roles, merely 261 minutes, in the World Cup, he scored the opener against Belgium, created five chances, and maintained a passing percentage of 92.5. But he is almost anti-stat, the footballer who can't be easily measured or deciphered in stupendous utility.

His manager in PSG, Luis Enrique once said: "He has everything a manager wants, intelligence, awareness, intuition. Everybody sings about Kвича or Dembele or Vitiinha but Fabian is as essential to the team."

Mother's sacrifice

He is humble and hard-working, the first to reach the practice and the last to leave. He says he owes these traits to his mother. She is his idol, he says in an interview with ABC (Andalusia Broadcast Corporation). He was only 12 when his parents divorced. His mother had to

MEN IN THE MIDDLE

Enzo: Architect behind transitioning beauty of the Argentine engine

Shashank Nair New Delhi, July 17

GO BACK and watch Enzo Fernandez when the English boos drown out the Argentine national anthem in Atlanta. Notice the ironclad grip he has on the shoulders of Alexis MacAllister and Nahuel Molina. Not one Argentine singing, all of them screaming. Screaming back. Eleven against all. Themes of the Falklands, memories of every battle against England wrought in their minds. And there is Enzo, an able conductor, now a midfield general, guiding them through that hallstorm of emotion, and later, skill.

He is neither Riquelme, nor is he Redondo. But in a minefield surrounded by Harry Kane, Jude Bellingham, Declan Rice and Elliot Anderson, four astute English ball-winners, Enzo had only one request: pass me the ball. Enzo asked for the ball 75 times in a 90-minute war, the most of any Argentine, Messi included.

At 25, this is his second World Cup campaign. He is arguably Argentina's second-most influential player behind Messi. That Enzo-to-Messi link is the lifeblood of Argentina's football transitioning from its midfield to its offence. On Wednesday, he did it all.

Back then, Enzo was known as one of the best products to come out of River Plate. Born to Raul and Marta Fernandez, his name itself set his destiny up. There is a coincidence that Raul Fernandez and Zinedine Zidane both named their sons Enzo based on the same footballer, Uruguayan legend Enzo Francescoli. The attacking midfielder won three Copa titles for Uruguay but it was his exploits for River that elevated his legendary status in Argentina. The long-time River supporting father had no option.

Tough childhood

Enzo's childhood was not easy. His father was a construction worker, always on the lookout for jobs. His mother worked as a cleaner. With four brothers to feed, football needed to be more than passion. River Plate spotted his talent. One of the first scouting reports on him came back with a line that stands true today: "He was so young, but you could see how intelligent he was." This was at the age of 5.

The teenage years were tough. He was called 'fatty', for being short and putting on some weight. He fell behind in age-group football but at the age of 17, coaches started to notice his on-ball talents, particularly in that no-man's land between a midfield and offense. Soon a push to the first team happened. From there, Enzo's rise has been mercurial, first landing in Benfica, then winning the 2022 World Cup and then moving to the Premier League with Chelsea. Now there are talks of Real Madrid and Chelsea in a desperate tug-of-war over him. The England semi-final performance showed why.

All through a volatile evening, Enzo tested the scope of his rifle. The first shot came in the 37th minute. Messi tried his luck first and the rebound fell to Enzo who took a pop from far out. The ball flew over Pickford's crossbar. It wouldn't be the last of the night. In the 60th minute, Enzo went for it again. This time it was from the right side, outside the English box. Gordon had already scored and Argentina were down a goal. To most it may have seemed like a wasteful attempt; but Enzo was one of the few calibrating their right foot. The last of those adjustments came in the 84th minute. Pickford was finally called into action, with Enzo's third long-range shot of the evening needing to be parried out of danger.

And then came the goal. Eerily similar to a guided missile that he had launched against the Netherlands in Qatar in 2022. Only that shot hit the post. Against England, he timed it better, and struck it harder. The ball sailed in and the comeback was on. Minutes later, Lautaro Martinez headed the ball in and a trip to the World Cup final was complete.

In 2016, when Messi decided to take a premature retirement from international football, Enzo, then a teenager, was one of the many young Argentines who wrote to Messi begging him not to give up on his World Cup dream. Then in Qatar, Enzo became the final piece Messi and Argentina needed to complete their fairytale. In a powder-keg that is a World Cup semi-final against England, the midfielder ended the night hoisting Messi on his shoulders as the capacity crowd in Atlanta chanted the legend's name. One more final to go. One more World Cup to win for his idol.

Root masterclass sets series decider at Lord's

Venkata Krishna B Chennai, July 17

IN THE age of power-hitting and escalating scoring rates in white-ball cricket, Joe Root showed why a batsman of his kind remains priceless to any side. His unbeaten 99 off 133 balls took England home by four wickets on a dicey Cardiff surface and set up a decider in the ODI series against India at Lord's on Sunday.

The right-hander's innings, straight out of the 1990s ODI playbook, has now set up a potential blockbuster decider, which could well be the international farewell for former India captain Rohit Sharma.

The 39-year-old's future is bleak beyond the England trip with the selectors ready to look beyond him for their next one-day assignment. As reported by this masthead on Thursday, the panel has informed the former ex-skipper of the decision to rope in Yashasvi Jaiswal for their next series, which will be at home against the West Indies in September.

Having won the first ODI at Edgbaston, there was an opportunity for India to close the series at Sophia Gardens, when they were 103/1 with Virat Kohli (65) in majestic form. Shreyas Iyer, batting at number five, complemented him with a 71-ball 66.

The turning point was Kohli's uncharacteristic dismissal — playing across the line and top-edging to deep third — which precipitated a mini-collapse. The three left-handers to follow — Washington Sundar, Axar Patel and Shivam Dube — managed just 2, 1, & 0 respectively as India ended up with 233 in 44 overs, which proved to be well below par.

Despite a spirited effort from the bowling unit, which had just five options with Washington unavailable due to a hamstring injury, it left Shubman Gill shortchanged.

Bumrah magic

If Edgbaston was the first glimpse of a revitalised Jasprit Bumrah, Cardiff gave more evidence of a bowler who seems to be somewhere close to his best. The 32-year-old put England on the backfoot straight away by dismissing Ben Duckett off the first delivery of the chase — the new ball angling away and kissing the edge en route to the wicketkeeper. When Prasidh Krishna had Jacob Bethell edging to Ishan Kishan in the fourth over, India were right in the game.

Harry Brook once again showed his adventurous side to gain some momentum, but eventually paid the price. He lined up to play the scoop, but Gurnoor Brar's pace and extra bounce meant he could only guide it to Kishan. Having made only 1 with the bat, the 'keeper was effective behind the stumps, taking four catches, including that of Sam Curran standing up to Dube.

Offensive captaincy

Despite losing Washington's services, Gill stayed on the offensive. India had no option but to claim all 10 England wickets, and went searching for them aggressively. But without the extra wicket-taking option, they always remained behind the eight ball.

That was the one glaring aspect of the bowling performance. Beyond Bumrah, India still lacks an X-factor bowler who will maintain pressure on the opposition.

Brar tested England with several short-pitch deliveries, but remained on the expensive side with 2/67 in 10 overs.

Whether Kuldeep Yadav plays at Lord's remains to be seen.

Given the conditions on offer at Cardiff, the stage was tailor-made for Root. He took his time, and with India short on bowling options, he preferred to take the game deep.

The England great may have wished one of the other frontline batsmen to have forged a big partnership with him, but even without significant support, he found the gaps and struck timely boundaries.

Even when India tempted him to open his shoulders, he showed the discipline to bat according to the situation. A hundred was there for the taking, but Gus Atkinson didn't give him the opportunity, scoring the winning runs off Krishna.

Earlier, no Indian batsman except Kohli and Iyer could kick on and make a big score. Take out the two of them, who made 131 runs combined; the rest managed only 102 among themselves. After Gill timed one straight to Duckett at cover while driving on the up, Ishan was undone by a short delivery, top-edging a return catch to Curran.

BRIEF SCORES: India 233 in 44 overs (Shreyas Iyer 66, Virat Kohli 65; Jofra Archer 3/47, Gus Atkinson 3/50) lost to England 235/6 in 44.1 overs (Joe Root 99 n.o., Will Jacks 30; Gurnoor Brar 2/67) by four wickets

Indian co-owner of Jaffna Kings arrested in Sri Lanka for bribery

Express News Service Chennai, July 17

THE 2026 Lanka Premier League (LPL) was rocked by controversy hours before the start of the new season, with one of the owners of Jaffna Kings arrested by Sri Lanka's Special Investigations Unit for the Prevention of Offences Relating to Sport over alleged corruption. In May 2026, Sports Commune, led by former India Under-19 World Cup winner Manjot Kalra and entrepreneur Mayank Goel, acquired the Jaffna Kings franchise.

At that time, Lanka Premier League director Samantha Dodanwela said, "Sri Lanka Cricket welcomes Sports Commune as the new ownership group of Jaffna Kings for Lanka Premier League Season 6. Jaffna Kings has built a strong identity within the league, and we are pleased to see committed owners with a clear interest in cricket, youth engagement and sports development stepping into the franchise."

According to reports emerging from Colombo, the Sri Lankan police made the arrest after a few players in the franchise that includes Bhanuka Rajapaksa, Avishka Fernando and Dunith Wellalage lodged a complaint. Following the investigation, police arrested the owner from a hotel in Colombo. According to the Sri Lankan police, the owner is accused of attempting to induce a player with money.

After the news emerged of the arrest, Sri Lanka Cricket responded with a statement. "Sri Lanka Cricket (SLC) has taken note of the media reports relating to the reported arrest of the owner of the Jaffna Kings franchise by the Special Investigations Unit (SIU) for the Prevention of Offences Relating to Sports. SLC, together with the Lanka Premier League (LPL) 2026, will extend its fullest cooperation to the Special Investigations Unit (SIU) for the Prevention of Offences Relating to Sports should any assistance be sought in connection with any inquiry arising from the matter," it said.

Similarly, IPG, which holds the commercial rights for the tournament, said all owners had undergone the requisite ownership approval process, including integrity and due diligence assessments conducted by the Anti-Corruption Unit of the SLC. "The integrity, transparency and credibility of the LPL remain of paramount importance. IPG supports and maintains a zero-tolerance approach to corruption, unethical conduct, and any activity that may compromise the integrity of the tournament," it said.

This is also not the first instance of a franchise owner being arrested for anti-corruption under the new law. In 2024, Dambulla Thunders owner Tamim Rahman was convicted, and Galle Marvels co-owner Prem Thakkur was also jailed for approaching a player to fix a match.

According to Sri Lanka's Prevention of Offences Relating to Sports Act, match-fixing, spot-fixing, and the failure to report corrupt approaches are criminalised. LPL and Sri Lanka cricket has been hit by anti-corruption charges in the past, with the International Cricket Council keeping a close watch. The Indian Express understands that a couple of days earlier, SLC's ACU wing, in a meeting with players of all teams, had warned about potential approaches to influence the matches.
